Parents Look On in Horror As Elephant Kills Boy, 5

Youngster Stamped To Death by Circus Animal as Show Prepares for Tour

Sarasota, Fla., March 26 (U.P.).—A circus elephant named Dolly today grabbed a 5-year-old boy with her trunk, pulled him into her ring and crushed him to death under her foot.

Dolly, described as one of the circus' oldest and heretofore most gentle elephants, snatched Edwin Robers Schooley as his parents and other persons strolling through the elephant house at the Ringling Bros., Barnum and Bailey Circus winter headquarters here watched in horror.

The tragedy provided a grim beginning for the circus' 1950 tour. The circus begins packing Monday for a trip to New York and its first public performance of the new season in Madison Square Garden on April 5.

Edwin was with his father, Prof. Elmer Schooley of Highlands University in Las Vegas, N. Mex., his mother and 6-year-old brother on a Sunday afternoon stroll through the circus' winter training camp when he stopped to feed Dolly a peanut.

J. D. Brown, circus watchman, said he heard a scream and turned around just in time to see the elephant pulling the child under a chain with her trunk.

The 27-year-old elephant was placed alone in another section of the barn after the boy's death. There she placidly munched hay. Circus officials decided not to take her on this year's tour.

Arthur Concello, general manager, said it was his "understanding" the child crawled under the guard rope to pick up some peanuts he had dropped, but police said witnesses told them the elephant grabbed the boy.

Circus officials immediately ordered the elephant house closed and an investigation begun. Henry Ringling North, vice president and one of the owners of the circus, said Dolly was an old-time circus performer, used to crowds and children and always very gentle before.

Prof. Schooley had arrived here two weeks ago with his family to study at the famous Ringling Art Museum at Sarasota.

Need for Rise In Steel Price Is Disputed

Republicans Blast Economic Committee Majority Report and Recommendations

The Joint Congressional Economic Committee, splitting cleanly on party lines, yesterday made public a pair of "'tis so, 'tis not" reports on last December's steel price increase.

The Democratic majority indicated that that increase, of about $4 a ton, was unwarranted, greedy, conscienceless and fraught with future danger to the economy.

The Republican minority said the increase appeared justified in view of future costs for employes' pensions, and was something proper and to be expected in the framework of a free economy.

Agree on One Point

On only one point did both sides agree. That was that there should be further study on the question whether there was full competition in the steel industry, and if not, how to obtain it.

But the Democrats also made three other recommendations to which the Republicans took violent exception. They were:

1. The Federal Trade Commission should collect, and make continually available for Congress, information on steel prices, output, costs and profits.

2. Steel producers should file with an appropriate agency of the Government schedules of projected price increases some 30 days before they are to go into effect.

3. A study should be made to see whether the steel industry has become similar to public utilities and whether it should therefore be regulated like public utilities, of whether other legislation is needed to preserve competition.

Fear of Regulation

In their minority report, the Republicans shouted that recommendations two and three looked toward price fixing and Federal regulation, both of which they condemned.

With respect to the proposal for a 30-day "cooling-off period" before increasing steel prices, the minority said:

"The only actual power recommended is the postponement of price increases for 30 days, but it seems clear that any action by a steel company contrary to the recommendations of a Federal board would bring an immediate demand for price-fixing powers."

The reports were the fruit of four-day hearings, called by Committee Chairman O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), in January.

Arguments of Majority

The principal arguments of the majority were these:

1. Steel prices even before the recent increase were far out of line, having risen much further than other industrial prices since the base year 1926.

2. Cost increases in 1949 amounted to only about $1.20 a ton, and were to some extent offset by some cost decreases. In any event, they were nowhere near the increase of $4 a ton.

3. Had there been free competition in the industry, the steel companies could never have got away with increasing costs. They simply lifted the price because the traffic would bear it. In export sales, where there was more com-

One Congress Case Noted

Loyalty Board Never Subjected To Executive Sway, Chief Says

No one in the Executive Department, from the President down, has ever attempted to influence the Loyalty Review Board in its findings, Chairman Seth W. Richardson said yesterday.

Interviewed on the "Meet the Press" television program (NBC), Richardson said one member of Congress had brought one case to the board, but had not pressed it. In answer to a question by Jerry Kluttz, The Washington Post's Federal Diary reporter, Richardson said:

"I think Congress has been exceedingly considerate in view of congressional habits and pressure from constituents. The President has never opened his mouth and no member of the Executive Department has approached us with respect to our operations. There has never been any attempt at control by anybody."

Richardson said loyalty boards had reviewed records of more than two million Federal employes with only 10,000 to 11,000 referred to the Federal Bureau of Investigation for field checks. Of these, he added, 150 to 160 had been

Far Eastern Expert Is One Senator Calls Top U. S. Red

Member of Faculty At Johns Hopkins Due Here This Week From U.N. Mission

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The man whom Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) has called the "top Soviet espionage agent" in this country is Owen J. Lattimore, famed expert on Far Eastern affairs and Johns Hopkins University professor.

Lattimore was first publicly identified as the man McCarthy accused by Drew Pearson, in his broadcast last night. McCarthy had made the charge Tuesday, in a secret session before the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee.

Most other reporters covering McCarthy's charges of Communist infiltration had been given the name on an off-the-record basis. With Pearson's public disclosure, their obligation to keep the name in confidence was terminated.

Due Home This Week

In open sessions before the Senate subcommittee investigating his charges, McCarthy accused Lattimore of being a "pro-Communist." Later, he added the much graver charges while testifying in a closed session.

McCarthy has repeatedly stated that he was willing to have all his charges "stand or fall" on the validity of his accusation in this "key case."

Lattimore is now in Kabul, Afghanistan, on a mission for the United Nations. He had planned to leave there today for Karachi, to fly back to the United States, arriving here about Saturday.

One Mission Recalled

McCarthy has said his "top spy" was "connected with the State Department." The State Department has supplied information to Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) chairman of the investigating subcommittee, suggesting that any connection was both remote and antique.

It told Tydings that Lattimore was a member of an overseas mission of four months duration five years ago.

That mission, The Washington Post learned, was to Japan, on the question of its war reparations. Lattimore was requested to go by the mission head, Edwin W. Pauley, then Ambassador and special representative of the President on reparations matters.

McCarthy branded the State Department history as "untrue." He has said that up until four weeks ago, the individual named, i. e., Lattimore, had a desk in the State Department. He has repeatedly insisted that Lattimore is a close and frequent departmental adviser, and is a top "architect" of American Far Eastern policy.

Red Uprising Nipped in Bud, Bolivia Says

La Paz, Bolivia, March 26, (AP).—The Bolivian government today announced it has smashed a Communist revolutionary plot geared to get under way Tuesday. A high-ranking Russian army officer was sent here by the Cominform, a communique said, to direct and advise local Communists.

Officers said 25 persons, including a number of students, were arrested yesterday when police raided a meeting of "The Partisans of Peace," at which finishing touches were put on plans for the coup d'etat. Those present, the communique said, also were organizing a "Bolivian Communist Committee."

Donato Millan, chief of the La Paz police, said the outbreak was to have been nation-wide, with operations to begin simultaneously in Oruno, Sucre, Cochabamba, Santa Cruz and Tarija.

He said the Soviet officer was accompanied here by two French Communist agents and that all three now are hiding somewhere in La Paz.

Millan said the instructions they issued here were reissued by Alejandro Ovando, described as the supreme chief of the Communist Party in Bolivia and the man recognized by the Cominform as the principal agent of the Kremlin in Bolivia.

The police chief said plans for trouble at Sucre were particularly important because of a meeting there of the National Teachers Congress.

Only 10 days ago the government announced that another plot had been crushed, that one by elements of the National Revolutionary Movement (MNR), which has directed previous conspiracies and revolutions in Bolivia.

Desist, or Face Electorate

Belgian Premier's Ultimatum Served on Pro-Leopold Party

Brussels, March 26 (AP).—Premier-Designate Albert Deveze laid down an ultimatum today to the Belgian Social Christian (Catholic) Party; abandon attempts within four days to restore King Leopold to the throne or face the electorate early in May.

He threatened dissolution of Parliament if the Social Christians refuse to accept a "national solution" of the Belgian crisis.

Deveze, leader of the Liberal Party, which is opposed to Leopold's return, was asked yesterday by Prince Regent Charles to form a new Cabinet in an effort to resolve the royal question of the exiled King's return or abdication.

As Defense Minister in Belgium's present caretaker Cabinet, Deveze is due to attend a meeting of North Atlantic pact defense ministers this week at The Hague. For this reason, he said, he will not negotiate with political leaders beyond Thursday, when he intends to leave for Holland.

In his showdown with the Social Christians, Deveze, a square-jawer, 68-year-old World War I artillery officer, did not spell out

Bus Kills D. C. Man, 89

An 89-year-old man, struck by a Capital Transit bus, died at 9:50 p. m., yesterday at Casualty Hospital, less than four hours after the accident. Hospital attaches said he suffered a fractured skull.

He was identified as Cavour O. Bohrer, native of Washington and member of an old family here. Since 1948, he had lived with the John Dickson family at 5000 14th st. nw.

The bus was driven, police said, by James C. Sturgill, 21, of 646 F st. sw. He told them he had stopped for a traffic light at 14th and I sts. nw., and one car had stopped ahead of him. He said the light changed to green, the advance car started, then he started the bus. He said Bohrer was obscured by two cars at the left, then

Patient Finishes Cigarette, Then Dives to Death

A man identified as Willie Dion, 68, a patient at Soldiers' Home Hospital, dived to his death yesterday afternoon from a second-floor porch at the institution.

Police said he had been in the hospital since last November

Another patient, whose window looked out on the porch, told police he saw Dion come out on the porch, smoke a cigarette, and then throw it over the rail. Then, he told police, Dion dived over head first after it.

Vandenberg's Letter Seen Aiding Moves For Policy Committee

By The Associated Press

Responsible Administration officials yesterday privately welcomed Senator Vandenberg's proposal for a special commission to dig into the critical cold-war problem of what to do after the Marshall Plan ends.

There is evidence such a group will be set up and Vandenberg's plug for the idea may speed it.

The Republican Senator's suggestion caught on in Congress, with Democratic support quickly lining up.

Secretary of State Acheson, Recovery Chief Paul G. Hoffman and others of President Truman's top administrators and advisers were represented as highly pleased by the Michigan Senator's proposal. It appears in harmony with their own plans of attack on the problem which has been submitted to the President.

Close Victory Expected for Aid Program

Pre-Easter Speedup Due to Push Action On Bill by Mid-Week

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

In a pre-Easter speed-up Congress headed today for a House showdown by midweek on the Administration's foreign aid program and an opening floor skirmish on the 29 billion dollars omnibus appropriation bill.

Even the slower-moving Senate picked up its feet. A Senate vote Wednesday on the politically volatile natural gas bill will be followed by a weekend return bout on the buffeted DP legislation.

The House, hurrying toward a ten-day Easter recess, April 6 to 17, was due to come up with the first important test—a decision on whether the Administration's ECA and Point Four programs can be held intact.

The $3,276,500,000 single package foreign aid bill may not go to a final vote before Wednesday.

Battle Royal Ahead on Funds

Conceding some limited cuts may be made in both programs, leaders hoped to free the Marshall Plan of most committee restrictions and to ease Point Four to passage by a very close vote.

All but overshadowing the foreign aid test was the coming battle royal on the session's central money bill, already trimmed a billion dollars by the House Appropriations Committee.

The omnibus funds bill is slated to follow foreign aid before the House, and House Republicans are determined to cut it another 1½ billion or more.

It was a toss-up last night whether the huge bill, with its 11 departmental "chapters," can be passed before the House takes Easter leave next weekend, but leaders have decided to make the attempt.

Still undecided on their key economy motion, House Republicans called another meeting of their top policy-makers for Tuesday.

Some Democratic Support

House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., (Mass.) invited ranking GOP members of all House Appropriation subcommittees to submit proposals for further trimming the bill.

A large bloc of economy-minded Democrats have indicated they will

Tito Gets 95% Of Votes Cast in National Elections

Belgrade, March 26 (AP).—Yugoslavia's voters dropped rubber balls in ballot boxes today to indicate approval of Premier Marshal Tito's independence of the Cominform.

Early election returns showed Tito and his unopposed candidates for Parliament were receiving more than 95 percent of the votes cast.

Tito and his partisans of the People's Front ran on the only ticket permitted. Anti-Titoists could only vote "No"—not for a candidate of their own.

First complete returns came from the town of Mostar in the western district of Herzegovina. The government ticket got 17,875 to 88 negative votes.

Tito himself voted in a lushly carpeted schoolroom.

Silent Optimism Marks Chrysler Strike Parley

Detroit, March 26. (AP).—Negotiators got together for an hour today in an attempt to settle the Chrysler strike, now in its sixty-first day.

The brief session indicated either Chrysler Corp. or the CIO United Auto Workers had made a new move in peace talks aimed at getting 89,000 Chrysler employes back to work. Any development, however, was kept secret.

Observers said an air of optimism prevailed with top negotiators from company and union.

Federal and State conciliators said pension proposals were discussed further today and that another session will be held Monday.

Company and union are $16,020,000 apart in the dispute over methods of financing $100-a-month pensions, including Federal Social Security, for Chrysler workers.

Puffing Firemen Find Harmless Puffing Chimney

A mistaken passerby who telephoned the Fire Department last night that the Lansburgh & Bro. department store was burning brought 13 pieces of fire equipment on a false-alarm run.

The passerby telephoned that heavy, black smoke was pouring from the roof. The department, not one to take a chance, turned out its forces.

At the store employes told the firemen the smoke was from the chimney, that they were burning trash in an incinerator, that it was a normal operation every day, that no damage was done and no part of the structure ablaze. So the firemen hitched up their rigs and went back to their stations.

He and Detective Wilson Purdy of the Prince Georges County Police, who investigated the shooting, said it would be almost "impossible" to determine how the accident occurred since the youngster was alone at the time the gun went off.

The 1950 census, that is. Not the door-to-door canvass by the enumerators which begins this Saturday, April 1, but the business of putting together and adding up all the facts and figures they'll gather.

Most of the job will be done at Suitland, Md., the Census Bureau's GHQ, and in Tempos I and J near the Washington Monument. Part of it will be handled at Philadelphia.

When all the big sheets—carried from door to door by the enumerators and filled in with your answers to the questions—are brought together, they're checked, edited and coded. "Coded" means transferring answers into numbers from zero to 99—if you say you're a housewife, that's a number 2 in the proper column. Or your job as a carpenter might be number 47 in another.

Then the big sheets go to Bouncing Betsy, a machine with a big curved drum. About 4000 women, half of them in Washington, will "translate" the facts (already "coded" into figures) onto punch cards by tapping the numbered keys on the device. Around half

Navy Lines Up Harbor Guards Against A-Attack Possibility

The Navy is setting up units of civilian volunteers to learn how, if called upon, to man defenses of 28 major coastal cities against sneak atomic attacks by submarines or surface ships.

The harbor defense units of Volunteer Naval Reservists have been authorized in coastal cities from Portland, Me., to Port Hueneme, Calif.

A Navy officer said yesterday the location of the other cities involved is secret, except for five where units previously had been established. These are San Francisco, San Diego and San Pedro, Calif., Norfolk, Va., and Philadelphia.

Qualified reservists who join the units will be trained for such jobs as operating nets at harbor entrances to block submarines or torpedoes and control surface ships. Training will be given also in the operation of electrical "eyes" and "ears" to detect craft approaching or trying to slip through temporarily opened nets, as a midget Japanese sub did at Pearl Harbor.

The harbor defense training program was outlined in "All Hands," information bulletin of the Bureau of Naval Personnel.

Under the program, reservists will attend classes, lectures and showings of harbor defense films in their spare time, without pay. Some may be paid for two weeks of active duty training, since the Navy's budget includes funds for active duty training pay for 15,000 volunteer reservists.

Lobbying Inquiry Opens Quietly Today

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

With the calm atmosphere of a college classrom, the House Select Committee on Lobbying Activities today will open its inquiry into the pressure forces shaping the laws that go on the Nation's statute books.

Although the hearings have been widely heralded in some quarters as possible "political dynamite," the first witnesses apparently were selected to set the stage for what Chairman Frank Buchanan (D., Pa.) has announced will be "a fair and objective inquiry" to see if Congress can draft better legislation to bring lobbies out into the open.

Four college professors and two specialists of the Library of Congress legislative reference service will participate today and Tuesday in sessions on the role of lobbying in representative self-government.

The first witness will be Dr. Hadley Cantril, professor of psychology and director of the office of public opinion research, Princeton.

Dr. Cantril is the author of "Psychology of Radio," "Invasion from Mars," "Psychology of Social Movements," "Gauging Public Opinion," "Psychology of Ego-Involvements," and "Understanding Man's Social Behavior."

He will discuss the factors which shape public opinion and thus, presumably, influence the legislative process.

The second witness is Dr. Stephen Kemp Bailey, assistant professor of government at Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., author of "Congress Makes a Law."

Bailey will discuss the lobbying process in action on all fronts in the legislative battles over passage of the Legislative Reorganization Act.

Tuesday there will be a round-table discussion among four experts on "The Theory of Identification and Regulation of Lobbyists by Legislative Bodies in the United States."

These are:

Dr. Edgar Lane, instructor in politics, Princeton University.

Dr. Belle Zeller, professor of political science, Brooklyn College, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Dr. George Galloway, senior specialist in American Government for the Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress.

Dr. W. Brooke Graves, specialist in American Government and Public Administration for the Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress.

On Thursday morning, Frank Pace, jr., director of the Bureau of the Budget, and Lindsay Warren, Comptroller General, will discuss the Government's role as a lobbyist.

Voting Tonight

9 in Running For County School Post

The name of the incumbent, Stanley Stine, was added to the list of nominees for the convention to be held tonight to select five persons to be recommended for one membership on the Montgomery County Board of Education.

Stine was nominated yesterday by the Parkside Elementary School Parent-Teachers Association. He is completing a six-year term as a board member and served two years as president. He resides at 617 Bennington lane, Silver Spring.

Another name added yesterday was that of Mrs. Roland Green of RFD 1, Gaithersburg, nominated by the Montgomery County Farm Bureau. The two nominations bring to nine the number to be placed before the convention at 7 p. m. at Leland Junior High School.

Nominations also may be made from the floor, but require four seconds.

The board of directors of the Silver Spring Board of Trade yesterday declined to take part in the nominating convention. Einar Christensen, president, said the board had decided the convention "appears to have strong political implications" and that the board is prevented by its Constitution from entering political endeavors.

Christensen said the Board of Trade is "vitally interested" in having outstanding and qualified representation on the Board of Education but feels the existing board has done an excellent job.

Christensen said the board feels the county and State school system has made great strides under the present State administration and has every confidence that Governor Lane "will have the best interests of the community and our county at heart when he makes the selection of a new board member."

Fairlington Workers Map Vote Campaign . . .

REGISTRATION DRIVE—Committee Chairman Donald Murtha gives instructions to volunteer workers, from left, Mrs. Milton Chase, Mrs. Fenton Shephard and Mrs. Thomas Street

With an eye on the calendar and a foot in the door, four groups of Arlington County citizens have instituted a sweeping get-out-the-vote campaign for more representative government.

Banded together in a project centering around Fairlington are the Fairlington Leagues of Women Voters.

They form the Fairlington Precinct Joint Committee on Registration of which Donald Murtha is chairman.

Its purpose is "to get as many people as possible in Fairlington precinct to register and vote."

At a meeting last week, the committee put on a skit demonstrating the technique to be used in a door-to-door educational campaign to increase voter registration.

A potential 15,000 registered voters is its aim of whom only about 10 percent are now on the books, according to Murtha.

To achieve its end, the committee was instructed to "use whatever means you find necessary to encourage individuals to act—such as information on how to register, need for transportation, follow-up telephone calls, or revisits."

In its work, the nonpolitical organization has also pointed up these salient features of qualification requirements:

1. To vote in Virginia in 1950, county citizens must have lived in the State a year, in Arlington six months, in a given precinct 30 days.

2. To vote in general or primary elections this year, all poll taxes ($1.50 per year) must be paid by May 6. For three-year residents, the tax is due for 1947, 1948 and 1949. For residents moving in during 1948, taxes are due for 1948 and 1949. And for those who moved into Virginia before November 7, 1949, tax is for 1949 only.

3. Registration is required for voting, but once registered, always registered.

4. Voters may register at the central registrar, Arlington Court House, between 8:30 a. m. and noon and between 1 and 5 p. m. on week days. Precinct registrars are also available.

5. "Apportionment" restrictions on Civil Service employes living in Virginia do not apply to the following:

a. Veterans.

b. Permanent (competitive status) employes

c. Professional and scientific positions with entrance salaries over $3000 a year.

d. Most crafts, protective and custodial positions, with the exception of messengers.

e. Telephone operators.

f. All positions in the Government Printing Office and in field offices of agencies in Greater Washington.

The committee pointed out that "some Civil Service employes have not become voters because of a misunderstanding of the State apportionment system."

C. U. Student Lawyers to Argue Case

Law student teams from Catholic University, the University of Virginia, Yale, and Fordham will argue a mock case before a panel of judges headed by Supreme Court Justice Tom C. Clark this week at the Catholic University Law School.

The contest will begin at 7 p. m. Thursday, when the Virginia students will argue against the Yale team before Circuit Judge George T. Washington of the Court of Appeals, Judges Charles F. McLaughlin and Matthew F. McGuire of District Court.

At 9 that night, it will be Catholic University vs. Fordham before Circuit Judge Wilbur K. Miller of the Court of Appeals, presiding. Judges Edward M. Curran and Edward A. Tamm of District Court.

Justice Clark, Chief Judge Harold M. Stephens of Circuit Court, Judge E. Barrett Prettyman of the Court of Appeals will hear the final round between the previous winners, at 7 p. m. Friday.

Not one single case of throat irritation due to smoking CAMELS

Yes, these were the findings of noted throat specialists after a total of 2,470 weekly examinations of the throats of hundreds of men and women who smoked Camels—and only Camels—for 30 consecutive days.

MAKE A NOTE...REMEMBER YOUR THROAT!

VOICE COACH George Griffin: "My career asks a lot from my throat. Thanks to the 30-Day Test, I found the cigarette that agrees with my throat—mild, flavorful Camels! They sure suit me to a 'T'!"

HOUSEWIFE, Mrs. Jane Christman: "I don't have to rely on my voice for a living, but throat irritation doesn't go with me either. My test proved Camels agree with my throat. Camels for me!"

SHIP-TO-SHORE RADIO DISPATCHER Donald Minor: "On my job, cigarette mildness is important. I stick to Camels because they're just right for my throat. They're a real mild, good-tasting cigarette!"

Pope's Message Seen Hitting Mercy Killing

Rome, March 26 (NYHT).—Pope Pius XII appealed to the people of the world today to change the view that suffering is always undesirable.

By implication, the Pope denounced recent mercy killings both as symptoms of the sinfulness which is weighing on humanity and also as an example of the way in which opportunities to atone for wrong-doing are evaded.

"The breathless search for every earthly pleasure, the exasperate attempt to win happiness here below at any cost, the flight from sorrow as if it were the greatest disaster, the shirking of every painful duty, all this makes life something that is sad and almost insupportable because it digs a deadly void around the spirit," the Pope told an estimated throng of 40,000 persons in St. Peter's Basilica.

First Form of Penance

The present repetition of insane gestures of rebellion against life and against its divine author means nothing else but this," the Pope added. "With anti-Christian pretexts an effort is made to exclude any sort of suffering. Know how to bear with life! That is the first condition for sanctity. Courageously embrace the daily cross of life even though it is often hard!"

Pope Pius spoke in the course of a "World Day of Penance" in which Roman Catholics throughout the world took part. The day was arranged at the direct request of the Pope who asked all Catholic bishops two weeks ago to arrange ceremonies in an appeal for peace and "a reform of manners."

Thousands Wait Outside

The throng to which Pope Pius spoke included many thousands of pilgrims. Among them were many American soldiers, sailors and civilians. Thousands of others who were unable to squeeze inside St. Peters waited in the plaza outside while the 1 hour and 20 minute ceremony continued.

In an effort to emphasize the penitential spirit of the ceremony, announcers, using six languages including English, asked persons present in St. Peter's to omit the usual cheers of "long live the Pope" when the pontiff appeared. Instead of being carried into the basilica on a portable throne on the shoulders of attendants, as is usually done, the Pope entered the temple on foot.

Special Rites Attended by Catholics

Tens of thousands of Catholics visited churches of the archdiocese yesterday to venerate the Blessed Sacrament which was exposed from the last mass until evening as a special observance of Passion Sunday.

At the request of Pope Pius XII, Washington Catholics joined members of their faith all over the world in praying for two particular intentions: a return to Christian morality and for safeguarding of world peace.

More than 2000 worshippers overflowed St. Matthew's Cathedral yesterday afternoon as the Most Rev. Ameleto G. Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, presided at the benediction of the Blessed Sacrament which closed the holy hour.

Also present were Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle, of Washington, and Bishop John M. McIntyre, Auxiliary Bishop of Washington. In the congregation were more than 500 members of the Legion of Mary, a Catholic lay organization dedicated to good works.

The sermon was preached by the Rev. Marcellus Scheurer, O. Carm., of Whitefriars College, Catholic U., who called the Legion of Mary one of the most valuable organizations in the world because it emphasizes that reparation is the key to salvation.

58 Czechs Will Return To Homeland

Erding, Germany, March 26 (AP). Some of the 58 Czechs who were unwilling participants in an aerial escape from their homeland want to return to Czechoslovakia because they fear Communist reprisals against their families, it was learned today.

This attitude was revealed by their answers to questions asked by American officials at this N. S. Air Force base. None of the Czechs would admit these fears to reporters. All 58 will be sent home Monday or Tuesday.

Several in the group defended the course that communism has taken in their homeland.

Large Cast Rehearses Cherry Festival Revue Before Mob of Eager Kibitzers at Watergate

By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

WAITING THEIR CUE—Limbering up as rehearsals got under way yesterday at the Watergate were ballet dancers Dolores Gilbert, 15, and Betty Wright, 22, who will take part in the musical revue, "Spring Is a Wonderful Things." Show will be presented Saturday and Sunday as part of Cherry Festival activities. Girls are members of Marion Venable Ballet

"Spring Is a Wonderful Thing" was busting out all over yesterday at the Watergate.

Navy bandsmen and glee club singers, comely "introductionettes," tap and ballet dancers were all over the Watergate barge in the general rehearsal of the Cherry Blossom Festival revue to be given at 2 p. m. Saturday and 2:30 p. m. Sunday.

And it was quite a show that the cast and Allen Zee, production manager of New York's Capitol Theater, put on for the 200-odd kibitzers in the bleachers.

"All right, kids, there's nothing to be nervous about," said Zee out in front with a critical eye and a microphone.

"Will the introductionettes spread out until the girls who are late get here?"—meekly the girls spaced out.

There was a roll of drums and a squad of Navy trumpeters entered from the wings, followed by an imposing fanfare of brass, accentuated by the orchestra.

"Hold it. Hold it. Let's take it once again. Let's try the entrance again. Let's have plenty of brass, Commander, make it look important."

Lieut. Comdr. Charles F. Brendler winked his baton at the musicians and they gave Zee a salvo of drums that drowned out a passing plane. Zee beamed.

Pretty soon the glee club was "catching it." They didn't come down from the balconies on the barge when directed.

Then it was Zee again—"I apologize, fellows—heigh, those sailors are locked out—I apologize, boys. I'll buy you all a navy next year."

Then it was the introductionettes. For a moment Zee thought they didn't know what to do with their hands. Then they remembered.

And they were singing: "Every show should have a proper introduction. That is why we are a part of this production . . ."

Slipping U. S. Defenses, Weak Pact Nations, May Mean War III Stalemate, Bogan Declares

NYHT News Service

The defense of the United States has been allowed to slip so far that the possibility must be faced of a stalemate without victory in the event of another war under these conditions, Vice Admiral G. F. Bogan, USN (retired), warned yesterday.

Admiral Bogan expressed the view that the other members of the Atlantic pact were still so weak and exhausted that they could not be relied on as allies. As a result, he said, it was quite likely that we should be driven out of Europe, and that both our air defense and anti-submarine equipment would turn out to be inadequate.

His statements amplified from the naval angle the warning given last week by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, that the United States had cut its strength below the safety level. General Eisenhower has been invited to testify this week before the Senate Appropriations Military Subcommittee.

Admiral Bogan, a Navy "Rebel" in the B-36 dispute, applied for retirement last January 3 rather than accept transfer from command of the United States First Task Fleet at San Diego, Calif., to the fleet air command at Jacksonville, Fla., normally a rear admiral's post.

He was the author of the letter to Navy Secretary Francis P. Matthews, complaining that unification had wrecked the Navy's morale. It was this letter, revealed to the public by Capt. John G. Crommelin, that touched off the unification probe.

Writing in the spring issue of Air Affairs, Admiral Bogan insisted that "we are not ready now to fight a future naval war," and forecast that if the present period of mutual suspicion erupted into war, "large, trusting segments of American citizens will suffer tragic disillusionment."

"It is highly possible that the final offensive will begin again at the scene of the last one—the shores of western Europe," Admiral Bogan wrote. "It may not ever begin. If we suffer, as we could, critical early reverses in Europe, such a war may not continue to an undisputed victory for us. It may end in a negotiated peace and indefinite armistice following a stalemate. I do not believe it will, but the possibility cannot be discarded."

He stressed that "naval thinking and planning must discount entirely the theory of the atomic blitz conducted from safe, secure bases on our own continent."

He warned that a "pressing and major naval task in any war in the foreseeable future" would be the defeat of the greatly improved snorkel submarine, and the detection of major air strikes before they reached their target.

He advocated the conversion of existing battleships primarily to the launching of missiles, guided and otherwise.

Apartment Building Blaze Takes Two Lives

Milwaukee, March 26 (AP).—A two-alarm fire swept through a 45-family apartment building early today, resulting in death for two persons, injuries for 10 and homelessness for at least 75 others.

Masked firemen fought their way through flames and smoke to rescue trapped residents as the blaze gutter the aged four-story brick structure.

Mrs. Mattie Holman, 34, jumped to her death from a third-floor window. Harry Davis, 59, was found by firemen lying in a corner of his bedroom, suffocated.

Pact Defense Plan Rejects 'Maginot' Idea

The Hague, March 26 (U.P.).—The Atlantic Pact master defense plan will call for a last-ditch defense of every member nation in event of attack, informed sources said today.

These sources, here for the Chiefs of Staff conference, said there is no plan for an immediate, strategic withdrawal to a set line in event of Russian aggression.

On the eve of a week of crucial meetings of top-level Atlantic Pact military and political officials, the sources denied the popular concept that defense calls for falling back on a line somewhere west of the Lowlands and for sacrificing several countries in the initial stages.

"There is absolutely no Maginot Line psychology involved in our plans," one ranking Western military official declared.

"We are not going to 'write off' any member nations and we are not going to retreat if attacked."

The chiefs, headed by chairman of the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff, will meet on Tuesday to approve the top-secret defense blueprint for western Europe.

The Atlantic Pact standing committee, a permanent body with headquarters in Washington, has drawn up an agenda for the chiefs that is expected to deal principally with these problems:

1. The maximum in money, arms and men that each member nation can contribute to the defense pool.
2. Unification of arms and standardizing military operating producers such as communications and battle orders.

Rival Rally Set for May Day By Anti-Reds in West Berlin

Berlin, March 26 (U.P.). — The Western Allies have agreed to permit a mass demonstration of hundreds of thousands of West Berlin anti-Communists on May Day only about a mile from a huge Communists rally, informed sources said tonight.

The sources said the Allied decision was urged by the British, and finally accepted by the Americans and French.

Western officers fear American MPs and Red army soldiers may become involved in possible rioting.

Police estimated that 600,000 West Berliners and 250,000 Communists would attend the rallies.

Italian Communist Seeks to Become Monk

Ferrara, Italy, March 26 (U.P.).—Ruben Zappaterra, for many years local Communist propagandist, today announced his resignation and formal application to the Roman Catholic Church to accept him as a novice in a monastery.

Zappaterra said he had experienced a "crisis of conscience" after recent Communist violence and had decided to devote himself entirely to religious life in a monastery.

Everything at Steak!

by Albert Parchey Mesirow

IT WAS nearly 10 years ago that our Chef, James Heller, persuaded me to bring his protege Wilbur Smith into our "family" as Salad Chef. That was a decision I am proud to have reached. For not only does Wilbur concoct a Rocquefort dressing that is out of this world (he uses buttermilk as the blending agent) and a Russian dressing that practically everyone raves about, Wilbur is also the inventor and sole proprietor of the secret of our cole slaw, which a certain gastronomical cult here maintains is the world's best. I have tried to pry the secret loose from Wilbur by threats, cajolery and stealth, to no avail. My frustration, at one point, was threatening to wreck my health, so I made a pact with Wilbur. He has agreed to put the formula into his will, so that if anything untoward happens to him, posterity will still be able to enjoy his masterpiece . . . at Parchey's, of course. But Wilbur is young, vigorous and disgustingly healthy, and so I suspect that perhaps I'll never find out what it is that he does to make cole slaw great. Unless I can catch him in the act . . . something that I haven't been able to do in nearly 10 years! Incidentally, Wilbur doesn't particularly care for cole slaw himself. He prefers salad with Russian dressing. And at home his wife makes the salads and dressings, he says.

Major and Mrs. R. B. Thornal, USA, attache of the American Embassy in Moscow, were also guests during the week. The Major, who flattered us by saying that his steak dinner was one of the best meals he had had in Washington, refused comment on our recent story about Beef Strogonoff. But Captain George J. Dufek, USN, was intrigued enough to come in and ask for the recipe. On the theory, no doubt, that a struggle with the intricacies of Beef Strogonoff could give the Navy an idea of what it might come up against some day!

When my militant and fundamentalist Aunt Adeline was last in Washington, she loosed an indignant blast at the way people treat mushrooms here in the effete East. "Imagine slicing a mushroom into thin slivers!" she exclaimed. "If people can't take mushrooms the way Nature meant 'em to be, round and plump and full of musty flavor, they ought not to eat them at all. I heard a man on the radio talking about 'gossamer light mushroom slices.' That's like talking about gossamer-light overalls!" For those who feel as Aunt Adeline does, we are pleased to report that at Parchey's we get mushrooms direct from the grower in Kennett Square, Pa. They are big, round beauties, rich with the fine flavor and aroma of the good earth. We clean 'em and saute 'em in best creamery butter, using turkey stock and secret herbs and spices. Aunt Adeline would approve of that, but I shudder to think what she would say if she knew that in the sauteeing, we use generous amounts of dry, nutty-brown sherry wine. But regardless of Aunt Adeline, I'm sure you'll enjoy Parchey's mushroom sauce. Ask for it with your New York Sirloin Steak next time you're in. The address: 19th at K sts., nw.

Autopsy Indicates Rape of Slain WAF

On Gravel Bar

Kidnaped Girl Found Murdered

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
JOANN DEWEY

Stevenson, Wash., March 26 (U.P.). The nude body of Joann Dewey, attractive 18-year-old hospital worker kidnaped a week ago, was found by fishermen today on a gravel bar of the Wind River and authorities pressed a giant search for her two abductors.

The Skamania County sheriff's office announced that the body had been "positively identified" by three law officers, including a friend of the Dewey family, Washington state patrolman Harold Cusick, during a hastily-called coroner's jury inquiry at the edge of the river.

Coroner-Prosecutor Raymond Sly, who summoned the jurors into the wilderness, said the skull had been split and bruised. The body was partially covered with water and lodged to the gravel bar by rocks. After the coroner's jury meeting over the body, it was taken to Camas, Wash., for autopsy.

Miss Dewey, an employe of the Portland, Ore., sanitarium, was beaten by two men and dragged forcibly into an automobile on a dimly-lighted Vancouver, Wash., street last Sunday night, March 19. Residents said they heard her screams as she was shoved into the car.

Until today, no trace of the girl had been discovered, despite a painstaking hunt by 400 volunteers afoot, on horseback, in automobiles and in private planes.

Vancouver police had expressed the opinion that Miss Dewey had been criminally assaulted and possibly killed by her abductors, and they carried out their search for her on the basis of that theory.

San Rafael, Calif., March 26 (AP). An autopsy report today showed evidence of rape in the strangling of an attractive woman Air Force sergeant.

The FBI announced last night Sergt. Lyle H. Buswell, 32, after hours of questioning admitted he choked Staff Sergt. Fairy E. Decker, 44, to death early yesterday but denied raping her.

Her partly nude body was found near her barracks at Hamilton Air Force Base about dawn yesterday.

A Letterman General Hospital autopsy report said lacerations, bruises and other evidence were "consistent with rape."

A joint statement by the FBI and Air Force said Buswell, of Rutlant, Vt., told of an early morning tour of restlessness after heavy drinking, of finding Mrs. Decker on a cot in the barracks orderly room and of struggling with her and then choking her until she became limp. He said he removed and disarranged her clothing to make it appear as rape.

Sergeant Decker, who looked much younger than her 44 years, was the mother of a 22-year-old son, Horace. She formerly was of York, Pa., where her husband, Paul Decker, now works in a mill. The slender brunette, a clerk-typist and a spare time Sunday school teacher, had worked in the same office with Buswell.

In the Marin County jail Buswell talked to no one. The FBI said charges would be filed and Buswell would be arraigned before the United States Commissioner in San Francisco Monday.

Annexation Talks Set

D. C. Infant Mortality Rate Second Lowest in U. S. During 1948

A sharp decline in infant mortality in Washington brought the District's rate down to the second lowest among the 48 States, according to figures for the year 1948, released early today by the Federal Security Agency.

Washington's rate dropped from 31.9 deaths per 1000 live babies born in 1947 to 25.5 in 1948. Over the Nation generally, the rate dropped slightly, 32.2 to 32, during the same period. A total of 3,535,068 babies were born alive in 1948.

Maryland stayed well below the national rate, dropping from 31.6 to 28.8, but Virginia went against the national trend with a rise from 36.6 to 38.5.

With infant deaths decreasing from 691 in 1947 to 531 in 1948, the District's infant mortality placed second only to the rate of 24.3 reported by Connecticut. Oregon tied the District for second place. New Mexico had the highest rate in the Nation, 70.1.

The FSA report said incomplete national reports for 1949 indicate a further decline to a rate of 31.

Since 1940, the mortality rate has plummeted nationally from 47 deaths per 1000 born to its current level of 32 or less. In this area, Washington had a rate of 49.3 in 1940, Maryland had one of 49.1 and Virginia's rate was 58.5.

Of the 113,169 infants who died in 1948, 21,135 were nonwhite children, giving the country's nonwhite population an infant mortality rate of 46.5 per 1000 compared to the over-all rate of 32. Between the sexes, male infants died at a rate of 35.9 per 1000, while the famale rate was 27.9.

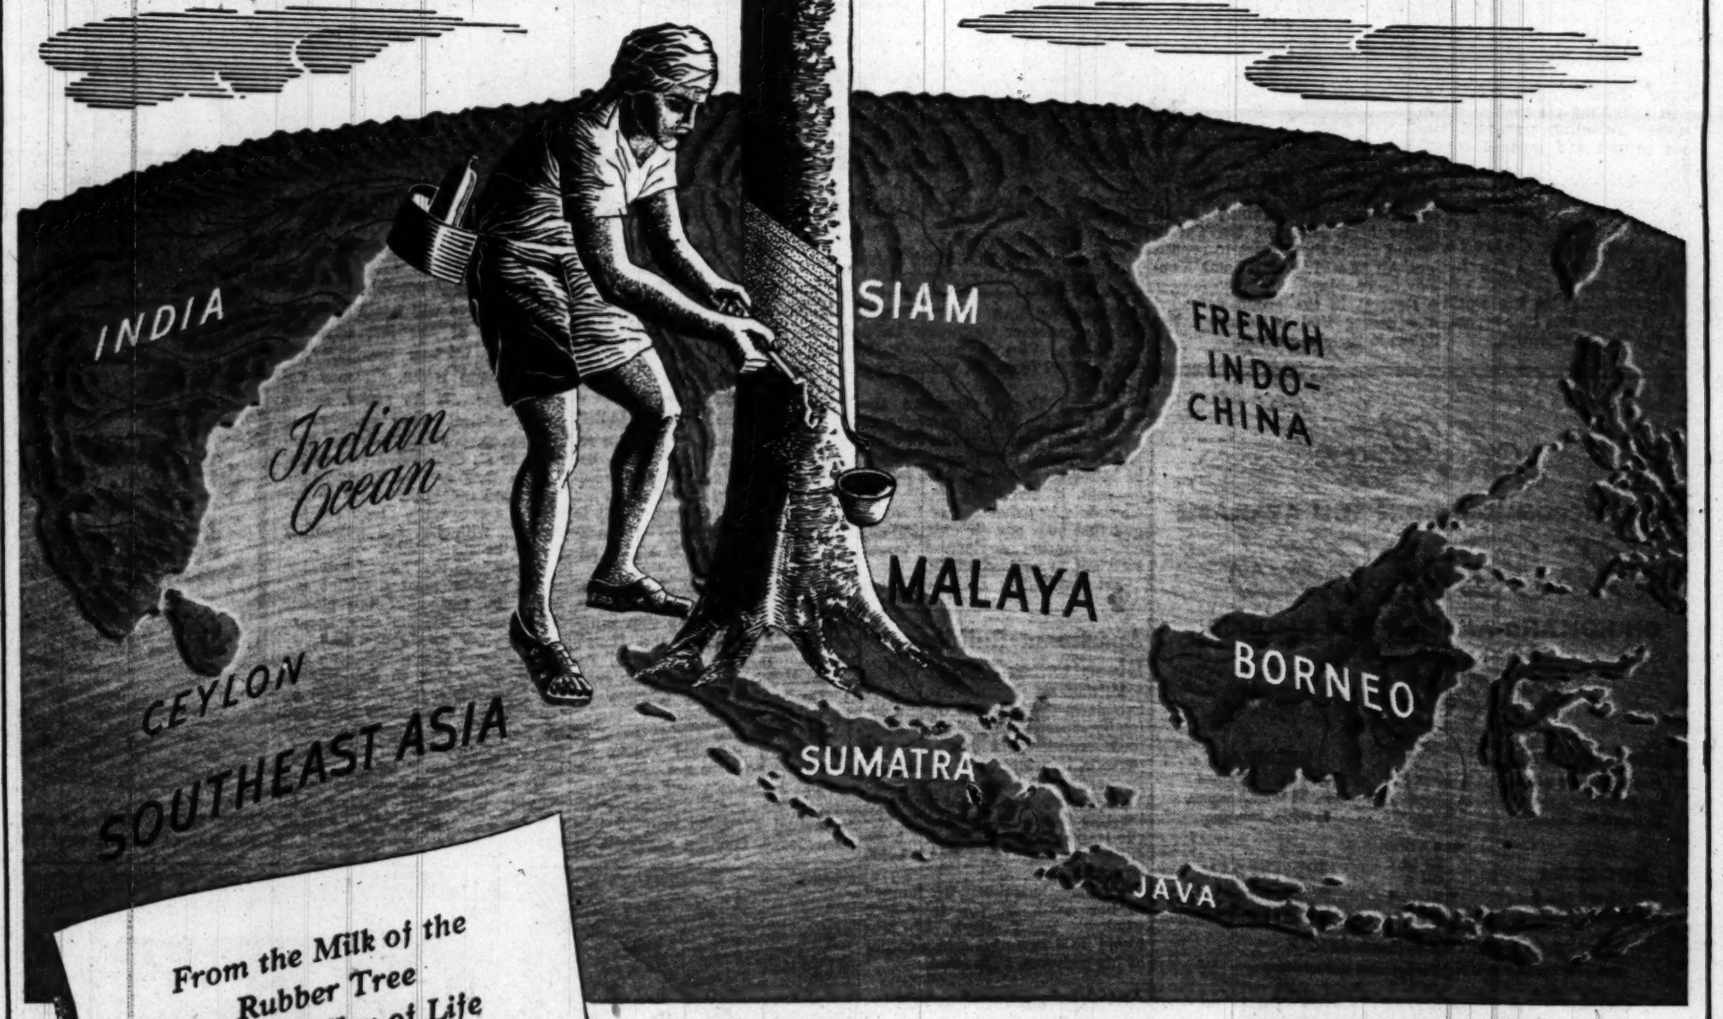
You Have a Stake in SOUTHEAST ASIA



From the Milk of the Rubber Tree Flows a Way of Life

Over 90% of all the rubber grown in the world comes from this area — Southeast Asia.

Rubber is the chief source of income for millions of families in Southeast Asia.

The United States uses about ½ of all the rubber produced in Southeast Asia — last year about 600,000 tons.

Rubber is the greatest dollar-producer for sterling countries — helps "close the gap" between exports and imports.

Natural rubber sells on a free market — completely unsubsidized and uncontrolled.

Over half the rubber from Southeast Asia comes from small one-family farms of a few acres — the rest comes from larger plantings called "estates."

Rubber is your cushioner.

You can sit on it, sleep on it, walk on it, ride on it.

Without it, modern civilization would stop — no cars, no trucks, no planes, no radios, no telephones.

Real natural rubber is the best all-purpose rubber today. Thanks to research, it will be even better tomorrow.

Natural rubber has thousands of uses, yet new ones are being discovered all the time. (Latest new use is to mix it with asphalt to surface roads — makes them wear longer and reduces skidding.)

Yes — more natural rubber means better living — for all.

NATURE AND SCIENCE SERVING MANKIND

AF Report Praises Racial Integration

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Integration of Negroes and whites is "working well and without friction" in the Air Force. President Truman's Committee on Equality of Treatment and Opportunity in the Armed Forces reports.

Last May, the Air Force established a new racial policy, which called for breaking up of most segregated units and complete equality of assignment and training on an integrated basis. The President's committee, which had urged the change, has completed a first survey of how the program is working.

E. W. Kenworthy, executive secretary of the group, was sent on a tour of major Air Force bases for a first-hand look. He reports that 71 percent of the Negroes in the Air Force now are "living and working in integrated conditions."

"Almost without exception," his report states, "commanding officers stated frankly that, although they had recognized the merits of the new Air Force racial policy when it was announced, they had been apprehensive.

"Without any exception, they added that their fears had been completely groundless, and that they were amazed at the ease with which the new policy had been effected and the absence of trouble."

Kenworthy views this "quiet social revolution" inside the armed forces as influencing racial relations throughout the Nation. Telling of his conversations with both white and Negro officers and enlisted men at seven USAF bases, he said:

"It was the opinion of some officers that this program could not but have an effect, eventually, on civilian attitudes; that it was impossible for a white boy to live and work beside a Negro in basic training and in the technical schools, without some real change taking place in his attitude toward race and racial equality."

The report attributes the success of the program largely to the "quality and resolution" of commanding officers to make it work.

"Unquestionably, however," it was added, "the almost total absence of opposition that had been anticipated in the enlisted man is a contributing factor in the success of the policy. The men apparently were more ready for equality of treatment and opportunity than the officer corps had realized."

Bolling Air Force Base was one of those inspected. The others were: Maxwell Base, Biloxi, Miss.; Lackland Base, San Antonio, Tex.; Davis-Monthan Base, Tucson, Ariz., and Williams Base, St. Louis, Mo.

"At Bolling," he said in his only reference to the local base, "There had been virtually no Negro personnel prior to the new Air Force policy. Presently, there are Negroes at Bolling assigned to maintenance, refueling, transportation, food service and medical squadrons."

Only at Maxwell was there still a segregated squadron. Of the 25,891 Negroes in the Air Force (as of December 31, 1949) 7402 were still in separate units, with 11,456 in mixed units, and the remainder in "pipelines"—mostly in integrated schools. Negroes, it was reported, make up 7.2 percent of the enlisted strength of the Air Force. At one technical training school, the percentage of Negro students was over 10 percent—well above the average.

Extracts from the report follow:

"Jobs—Wherever I went I saw Negro mechanics serving and repairing planes in the hangars and on the line. There were Negroes in radio repair. There were Negro instructors in classes. I saw Negroes in personnel work and in Air Police. There were Negro jet pilots."

"Housing and Messing—With the exception of Maxwell Field, I saw no Negroes who were separately messed and housed. Nor was there any attempt at segregation within the individual barrack or at the table. Individual Negroes were interspersed with whites; there was no clustering at one end of the barrack or one end of the table."

"Recreational Facilities and Social Functions—The Air Force policy was limited to military utilization and said nothing about recreational facilities or social life. The disposition of these matters has been left to the individual commander, and there was no fixed pattern in the arrangements and customs observed.

"At some bases there was complete integration of clubs, swimming pools and dances. At others there was a tacit, though incomplete and unenforced, segregation in service clubs and pools, and separate dances for white and colored enlisted personnel. . . .

"Prior to the adoption of the new Air Force policy, there were separate pools or certain days reserved for Negroes. Negroes are no longer prohibited from using any pool, though the local custom varies . . .

"Dances at the officers clubs and some NCO clubs are attended freely by Negro officers and NCOs. As for dances in the Airmen's and service clubs, the custom varies. In some stations there are no separate dances for whites and Negroes. In most camps, however, there continue to be dances for Negroes and for whites. However, Negro couples are not excluded and do attend, though in relatively small numbers.

"Movies and athletic contests are everywhere unsegregated, and Negroes are on service teams. In the South, where scholastic teams refuse to play against service teams with Negro players, the Air Force commanders are now generally taking the view that these schools must either play mixed service teams or be dropped from the schedule.

"Reaction—It was interesting to get the reaction of officers from the South. Some of them stated quite candidly that they did not like the new policy . . . but (they) were quick to add with equal candor that the new policy was working well and without friction.

"Most commanding officers remarked on the increased military efficiency of the new policy and the improved utilization of manpower. . . .

"If press comment is a reliable reflection of community attitudes, the Air Force policy and program are resented in the South. . . . Local commanders have taken the position that while the men under their command must obey laws off the station, the policy of the Air Force need not be attentuated on the station merely because of its geographical location . . .

"The difference between the attitude and treatment of Negroes on base and in civilian Biloxi is startling. The Negro airman who on the post, sleeps, eats, works, studies, plays side by side with his white fellows in uniform, finds when he goes off base that he is not permitted to walk on the main street of the town."

what he meant by a "national solution" of the Leopold question. His formula is believed to be Leopold's return for a short while—time enough to be vindicated—then abdication in favor of the King's 19-year-old son, Prince Baudouin.

Deveze, a shrewd negotiator, said he wanted a formula acceptable to all three parties—his own Liberal group, which holds the balance of power in the House of Representatives, the strongly pro-Leopold Social Christians and the violently anti-Leopold Socialists. Nearly all Liberals favor abdication.

Since Belgians voted March 12 by a majority of 57.68 percent to bring the King back from exile, the Socialists have staged numerous industrial strikes to protest Leopold's return. Opposition to the King is based on his 1940 surrender to the Germans and his wedding to a beautiful Flemish commoner.

Deveze declared the nation is on the brink of a chasm. He asserted the Social Christians are menacing the monarchy itself as well as national unity by their demands for the unconditional return of Leopold to the throne.

Victory Seen for Aid Bill support a "reasonable" further slice in the bill.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's Thursday night warning that this country already has reduced its armaments beyond the safety level, however, dulled some of the economy ardor. The bulk of the omnibus budget is for national defense.

A Senate Appropriations subcommittee, considering military items already lightly pruned by the House group has invited Eisenhower to tell them where American defenses are weak.

The Senate, meanwhile, was so far behind in its business that leaders planned no extended Easter recess. There was some talk, however, of recessing from Good Friday (April 7) through Easter Monday (April 10).

Wednesday's scheduled Senate vote on the Kerr natural gas bill, designed to exempt local gas producers from Federal regulation presented a delicate political issue, with Democratic lines split. President Truman has been reported on both sides of the issue. If the bill finally clears Congress and he signs it, some Republicans are set to charge that he's on the side of his favorite target, "the special interests."

On Thursday the Senate will consider an overloaded calendar, and on Friday, by special agreement, the Senate will return to the displaced persons bill. A debate limitation will cut down further DP talk, but leaders don't look for a final vote before the following Tuesday.

In this DP encore, the Administration is seeking to replace the still-restricted McCarran bill with the more liberal Kilgore substitute. Sponsors of the Kilgore measure claim the votes to win by a narrow margin.

The long-delayed flood control bill will follow DP legislation on the Senate floor and the often-postponed civil rights test on the Fair Employment Practices Act is tentatively scheduled next.

There remained a possibility, however, that the ECA authorization may be called up in the Senate ahead of FEPC, further postponing the civil rights test.

Need for Steel Price Hike Disputed in Inquiry Report petition, they found they had to decrease prices.

4. Profits of the two biggest companies were at all-time highs in 1949, despite the strike and even before the increases in price.

5. The companies are trying, with success, to get the customers to pay not merely for replacement of obsolescing and depreciating equipment, but for expansion as well.

6. Customers caught in the price squeeze were afraid to testify in public on what the steel companies were doing to them.

With fury, the minority plunged into a rebuttal of these findings in its report.

The principal contentions were:

1. The majority seemed to overlook the fact that the pensions were going to cost money. Best estimates, heard during he testimony, were that the cost would be about $4 a ton.

2. There was plenty of evidence of competition. Furthermore, it was proper and usual to charge more and earn more profits in a competitive situation where demand was heavy, as it is now.

3. If there is evidence of monopoly in the industry, why did the majority not present a case on it to the Department of Justice and ask remedial action?

4. Why should the companies not finance replacement and expansion from sales? That has been the pattern of American industry since it began.

For 20 printed pages, the minority took up the Democrats' report and, paragraph by paragraph, cited what it called "examples of bias." It concluded:

"The report does no credit to a committee set up by Congress to study, analyze, review and report on economic matters . . . in an impartial, scientific and constructive way.

Sharpest barb of all was added by Senator Flanders (R., Vt.).

"I am sorry that the Joint Committee is putting out reports of this caliber and I find myself astonished that some of my respected associates on the committee have read it so carelessly that they are willing to sign it."

BOY—From Page 1

Boy's Death Puzzles Police

"game" with some members of his family.

The accident occurred about 6 p. m. Saturday in the youngster's bedroom. The gun, an ancient revolver, was owned by one of Robert's three brothers, Harvey Ferguson, jr., 20. The two boys shared the bedroom; and the gun was kept in a bureau drawer.

The boy's mother, Mrs. Harvey Ferguson, sr., and a sister, Sylvia, 17, rushed into the bedroom after hearing the "pop" of what they thought was a cap pistol. That sound was followed by groans, they said.

They found Robert leaning against a bed, blood running from a wound in the left temple. Robert was left-handed, police said.

The boy told his mother or sister: "I shot myself." Then he collapsed, unconscious. He never regained consciousness.

The boy's father rushed him to the home of Dr. James I. Boyd, Prince Georges County medical examiner. From there Robert was taken to the hospital by the Forestville, Md., rescue squad.

Dr. Boyd concurred with Dr. Rosenberg in certifying the death as accidental.

Detective Purdy last night said he doubted whether Robert knew the weapon was loaded. He described the gun as a seven-chambered revolver, perhaps 100 years old. It fires .22 caliber bullets.

Purdy said the chamber revolves but does not "spin" readily; it contained only the death bullet, he said, and was presumably loaded by Harvey, jr. The older boy, an automobile mechanic as is his father, was at work at the time of the shooting.

In "Russian roulette" a player loads a single bullet into the chamber of a revolver; spins the chamber, then pulls the trigger. His life depends on his "luck."

The gun, it was found on examination yesterday, operates defectively. It does not fall into firing position every time the cartridge chamber is revolved. In one experiment, it took eight turns to put the chamber into firing position.

ROBERT FERGUSON
. . . Death a mystery

The weapon has a single-shot mechanism. The chamber does not turn automatically after the trigger is pressed, but must be moved by hand.

Harvey, jr., said he had had to "chase" his brother away from the gun on several occasions. The antique weapon seemed to have a fascination for the younger boy.

The boy is survived by his parents; three brothers, Harvey, jr., George L. and Melvin Ferguson; three sisters, Sylvia Ferguson, Mrs. Gloria Huss, of Washington, and Mrs. Winifred Mong, of Seat Pleasant, and two grandparents, Mrs. Robert Storm, of Winchester, Va., and John Ferguson, of Laurel, Md.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Move for Post-ECA Policy Unit Is Welcomed

Administration's relations with Congress—relations which as far as Secretary of State Acheson is concerned probably never were worse.

Vandenberg advanced his idea in a letter to Economic Cooperation Administrator Hoffman, made public Saturday.

He suggested an "unpartisan commission," similar to the 19-member group headed by Averell Harriman which in 1947 did much of the basic work toward creating the present European Recovery Program.

Vandenberg wrote that the group should be "equally unpartisan and equally impeccable in character."

He said its job would be to assess "our new responsibilities as the world's largest creditor nation and the world's spearhead in the quest of a dependable peace" after ECA ends in 1952.

At Acheson's direction and under the immediate supervision of Undersecretary of State James Webb the State Department developed and sent to the White House about a month ago a plan for creating machinery to tackle the post-ECA problem.

Mr. Truman is understood to have taken this plan to Key West, Fla., for study. It has been expected that he will act upon it shortly after his return here, if not earlier. It calls for two agencies to be set up by the President:

1. A committee of about 20 distinguished American citizens, including both Republicans and Democrats and leaders of business, labor, industry and the professions, to look into the whole question of what needs to be done in the world after the Marshall Plan ends and what resources America has for meeting world needs. This group would report to the President.

2. A new sort of economic high command within the Government for the dollars and cents side of the cold war. According to present thinking this would be an interdepartmental committee headed by an assistant to the President which would have the power to pull together the Government's economic policy planning for maximum effectiveness in waging the cold war. The first and most important task of this group would be to work out the detailed plan by which the United States would attempt to solve the problems that will arise when the Marshall Plan ends.

The heart of all these problems is that while the ECA program has helped block communism from western Europe and speed the recovery of the western European countries it will not have succeeded in making them independent of American aid by 1952.

Preliminary Government studies are said by officials to indicate that about one billion dollars of American help yearly will be needed for the rest of the world after the Marshall Plan ends, provided the United States can raise its imports by about three billion dollars.

suddenly stepped directly in front of the bus.

After Bohrer's death, Sturgill was booked on a charge of failing to yield right of way to a pedestrian and also was held for the coroner. He was expected to be released in custody of Capital Transit officials.

A nephew of Bohrer, Ernest Guy, 5401 16th st. nw., said the aged man for many years was superintendent of the old Convention Hall Market here and also had a business there at one time. Guy said his uncle at one time had been active in affairs of the Sons of the American Revolution, Order of the Eastern Star, and the Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, 4th and B sts. se., where he had served both as an elder and treasurer.

Bohrer leaves a 92-year-old sister here, Mrs. Mary E. Guy, 2706 44th st. nw., and two other sisters, one in Ohio and one in Pennsylvania.

Sturgill told police that while he was out of the bus to aid Bohrer and report to them on the accident, that someone stole his coin changer containing $20 in cash and an undisclosed number of streetcar tokens.

Nine persons, four of them pedestrians, were injured yesterday in the crash of two automobiles at 6th and P sts. nw.

Police said a car driven by Wade Cunningham, 23, of 101 1 st. nw., went through a red traffic light at "high speed," and struck one driven by Joseph H. Fields, 68, of 1609 6th st. nw.

The Fields car, as result of the impact, police said, went over a curb, struck the four pedestrians, and sideswiped a parked auto before coming to rest.

Fields was taken to Freedmen's Hospital in serious condition with back injuries. His wife, Ethel, 65, and their nephew, Richard Fields, 12, who lives with them, were treated at Freedmen's for cuts and bruises and released.

Two passengers in Cunningham's auto also were taken to Freedmen's. They were John Burnside, about 30, of 137 P st. nw., reported in serious condition with head injuries, and William Pitts, 33, of 431 L st. nw., treated for cut forehead and released. Some time later, police were called to Pitts' home, and arrested him there on a drunk charge.

The four pedestrians were Albert Kenner, 38; his wife, Elease, 38; their daughter, Elease, 7, and Alma Allen, 16, all of 5 Kansas ave., Silver Spring. They were treated and released except the daughter, who was admitted to the hospital with a fractured right leg. Freedmen's Hospital authorities said he was in good condition.

Cunningham was arrested and charged with passing a red light, driving at an unreasonable speed, and colliding. He was held for lack of $1000 bond.

Frederick Forbes, 52, of 497½ L st. sw., was in critical condition at Casualty Hospital yesterday with head injuries as a result of an accident at Marlboro pike and 61st st., Hillside, Md.

Police said Forbes' car was being driven by Luke Thomas, 29, of 902 6th st. se., when it apparently went out of control, skidded 90 feet, and overturned against a light pole. Forbes was pinned inside when the top and windshield were crushed down. Hillside firemen had to use hacksaws to extricate him.

The Play's the Thing at Army Speech Center

The Washington Post

At Forest Glen, Md., where the deafened are conditioned to new hearing skills, the play is truly the thing.

Classroom play production, more for treatment than for fun, is a regular weekly feature at the Army's Audiology and Speech Correction Center of the first Glen Annex, Walter Rood Hospital.

The plays generally are conversation pieces, rather than those involving dramatic action or pantomime. And therein lies their therapeutic value, says Dr. Aram Glorig, director of the center.

One of the primary purposes of the plays, Dr. Glorig explained, is to increase the patient's ability to "read" the human voice from the actors' lips and other facial movements of talking.

The patients, who take their turns as actors, are those who through illness or injury have developed hearing losses sufficient to require the wearing of hearing aids. Such deafening can occur through aircraft noise or high altitude pressures, gunfire and blasts, ear infections, as aftermaths of many virus diseases, and from other causes.

The Forest Glen installation, only Army rehabilitation center of its kind in this country, gets its patients from the Army, the Air Force, the Navy, Veterans' Administration, United States Public Health Service, and from the D. C. Rehabilitation Service. An average of between 100 to 125 patients are continually being processed through the five to six weeks' training courses.

Scripts for the play production phase of the courses are prepared by Miss Evaline Rae, lip-reading instructress. Last Friday's play was "Lincoln and the Voter," a humorous skit involving Lincoln and the professed vote-getter who thought the President should give him a job.

The patients are asked to turn off their hearing aids for the initial production, so that they can "read" the conversation, Miss Rae explained. They are then questioned closely on everything spoken during the show, and finally, the play is repeated for them while they listen with hearing aids attuned.

Light On Lobbying

The House investigation into lobbying opens today with the promise of being a very enlightening inquiry. Representative Buchanan, chairman of the investigators, wants to know why only 500 of an estimated 1500 lobbying groups have complied with the act of 1946 requiring the registration of lobbyists. The committee also has a keen eye open for any underhanded schemes to influence congressional legislation. Yet these are more or less side issues. What the committee is basically interested in, as we understand it, is probing to the bottom of the lobbying process. It insists on knowing not only how lobbyists work, but where they get their strength, how the ideas sponsored by lobbyists originate, and what is the effect of lobbying on representative government.

As the first witness the committee is calling Dr. Hadley Cantril, professor of psychology and director of the office of public opinion research at Princeton, who will discuss the factors that shape public opinion and thus influence the legislative process. The committee realizes that lobbying begins at the grass roots. Perhaps the most effective lobbying is done, not directly with members of Congress, but with their constituents. This is true in the case of lobbyists in the Government service as well as those working for private interests. If an idea takes hold among a large number of people, it is usually not very difficult to get Congress to accept it.

From the committee's agenda it appears that it intends to make a scientific study of how public opinion is developed and finally reflected in legislation. This can be an immensely useful study; for, as we have often pointed out, lobbying is an essential part of the democratic process. It becomes vicious only when special interests—outside or inside the Government—bring undue pressure to bear upon the representatives of the people. Out of this proposed comprehensive survey should come not only a better understanding of lobbying but also clearer ideas as to the efficacy of the present law and how it can be improved.

Bridge Confusion

A better name for the proposed East Capitol Street Bridge would be the Bridge of Misunderstanding. Despite approval of this site by the House District Subcommittee, some of the confusion arising from the welter of charges and countercharges by the District Commissioners and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission will remain. Busy Congressmen must have been more than perplexed by the muddle and the disgraceful impugning of motives that has taken place.

The District Commissioners must thank themselves for some of the rancor that has blown up over the question of where to put the new span across the Anacostia River. If the Park and Planning Commission is obdurate in its championship of Massachusetts Avenue, the Commissioners were precipitate in indorsing East Capitol Street before the planning commission had a chance to vote.

On the basis of present needs, the subcommittee vote for the East Capitol Street site has a good deal to commend it. With the plan to separate the entrances of the Baltimore and Annapolis freeways, there will be no need to go through the National Arboretum. East Capitol Street is a logical place to bring in the Annapolis traffic, and a bridge in this area has been indorsed by the Bureau of Public Roads. Also, because of the position of Fort Dupont Park, it would be much better situated than Massachusetts Avenue to serve the northern part of Anacostia. Despite somewhat greater cost, it would more adequately meet the demand as determined by the recent origin and destination survey taken by the Highway Department.

The East Capitol Street Bridge, to be sure, would have the disadvantage of bisecting the proposed sports center along the west bank of the Anacostia River. This is certainly an undesirable feature. The question, however, is whether the demands of traffic should take precedence over as yet unfulfilled plans, and also whether the sports center site is adequate, with respect to parking facilities and the like, to do what is expected of it anyhow. What is actually at stake is whether the city plan conforms to realities and whether, if the plan is to be followed, the Park and Planning Commission and the Highway Department ought not at least to be operating from the same set of traffic and population estimates. The one sure thing about the bridge controversy is that such local arguments ought to be thrashed out instead of throwing them on an overburdened Congress.

Unpartisan Approach

Senator Vandenberg's plea for an "unpartisan approach" to our critical problem of leadership in world affairs came three days after this newspaper had associated the "raucous spirit of faction" in Washington with the loss of his disinterested services. It is comforting to know that in spite of his double affliction—in spite of the constant pain he is suffering—the Senator is still able to employ his great influence in the cause of national cohesiveness and continued integration of the free world. His advice is entitled to the weight that is customarily given the words of a wise elder statesman who has risen above interparty and interfactional battles.

As we see it, there are two main points in the Senator's letter to ECA Administrator Hoffman. First, he says, "our overriding need is to clearly understand the victories we have won in this 'cold war,' and how we have won them . . ." Sufficient progress has been made that many people in the United States and in western Europe feel free to indulge in factionalism and attempt to stand divided. Petty quarrels accompanied by a sort of easy drifting have become the order of the day. Against this relaxation of effort comes Senator Vandenberg's appeal to remember "that we, and our friends, are engaged in a struggle that is epochal in nature and global in design." We cannot ignore, he says, the lesson that "free nations must continue as free nations to work together in closest, practical harmony for the effectual defense of their mutual heritage."

The Senator's second point is that to achieve this aim a new "'Harriman commission'—mobilizing the best brains available for consultation—" is needed "to determine what role is 'wisest and best' for America" in the present world situation. Six weeks ago we made a similar suggestion, urging "a reexamination of the whole situation by independent men of stature in our Nation called upon to do what Mr. Churchill called "exalted brooding." The idea of a bipartisan commission to advise the President as to the nature and extent of our current world responsibility has also had support from Senator Anderson and Representative Javits. On Saturday, Representative Nixon threw out a related but less realistic proposal for a conference of Republican and Democratic leaders to lay the basis for a consistent foreign policy.

Nothing could be accomplished, of course, by any attempt to minimize the President's leadership in this sphere. But much can be accomplished through bipartisan efforts under the President's leadership. It is a question of placing the national interest above petty politics, and that can be done only if high-minded statesmen of both parties are brought together to aid in shaping a course of action to which a vast majority of citizens will give their support. When that is done the defeatists and rumormongers will find themselves crying in the wilderness.

That it can be done has been amply demonstrated, as Senator Vandenberg points out. It was such "exalted brooding," free from partisan aims, that led to creation of the United Nations, that established the Truman Doctrine of aiding free nations in danger of aggression, and ushered in the Marshall Plan. It is strange that anyone should suppose we could give cohesive leadership to the free world with no means of attaining it in our own country. Senator Vandenberg's tactful letter ought to center the attention of the Nation on a truth that is scarcely less fundamental than freedom itself.

Presidential Warning

Reports that a bipartisan economy bloc in the House hopes to cut half a billion dollars from the foreign-aid authorization bill no doubt account for President Truman's appeal to Congress to vote the full amount called for as "the minimum consistent with the interest of the United States and our efforts to achieve a peaceful world." Economy-minded members of Congress need to be reminded that the foreign-aid program is not charity, but an investment for our own protection. When the Marshall Plan was launched, chief emphasis was placed on the economic benefits that would result from rehabilitation of the war-shattered industrial structure of European countries. Since then, the cold war has gained in intensity, and the public has become increasingly fearful that it may end in a third world war. That may explain why the presidential appeal emphasized the political rather than the economic objectives of the foreign-aid program. Nevertheless, the economic objectives are of primary importance, because unless they are attained, our political ties with aided countries will be weakened.

The ECA program has helped the nations of western Europe to rebuild their shattered industries and expand their production—preliminary steps toward restoration of international trade on a sound basis. As the world's greatest trading nation, the United States will be one of the chief beneficiaries of the recovery program, if it succeeds in reaching its goal. But that goal is still distant; production has been restored in aided countries, but little progress has been made so far toward removal of hampering trade barriers. Dollars are still urgently needed to bridge the gap between imports and exports and supplement the resources of the proposed inter-European payments union—a promising move to expand European markets through a freer payments system.

The ECA program had been cut to the minimum required to carry out the work that lies ahead before the request for funds reached Congress. The amount asked for is substantially less than the amount spent last year. If it should be arbitrarily reduced by several hundred million dollars, at a crucial stage of the recovery program, the benefits that we hope to gain from past investments may never materialize. Furthermore, the political consequences of this kind of false economy would be serious. We have given the people of western Europe reason to believe that they could depend on us to assist them through a difficult period of adjustment for a stated number of years. If we fail to make good, past favors will be forgotten, and resentment will take the place of gratitude. There is also the danger that a sharp cut in aid funds would entail economic hardships that would make converts to communism.

Harold J. Laski

Professor Laski's was a type of intelligence which, until recent generations, was far less familiar to British or American than to continental politics—the theorist whose influence in times of crisis makes itself felt in the conduct of affairs. France especially has been prolific of such types; some characteristic examples may be found in Brissot, Louis Blanc and Leon Blum. Unlike these three, however, Professor Laski was never tested by the responsibility of public office; his power was exerted through the classroom, the press and the party organization, but it was not on that account any less.

He was a brilliant teacher, in the sense that the effect of his teaching upon the minds of his students was enormous and lasting; and probably his influence was unmatched by that of any other teacher in his field. Whether it was for good or bad, is something that must be judged according to political first principles. His enemies, who throughout his life were always as numerous as his disciples, asserted that the logic of the Laskian political philosophy led inexorably into communism, and in some cases at least it seems to have done so. A good deal of ideological subtlety was sometimes necessary to discover just where the distinction between his goals and those of the Stalinists lay. On the platform and in the public prints he appeared more frequently as the advocate or apologist for Soviet methods and policies than as their adversary.

Neither here nor in his own country did Professor Laski's personality and doctrines have the same fascination for the public at large that they held for so many of his fellow intellectuals. His was not the stuff of which popular leaders are made. For one thing, his appearance was against him. As his strong admirer, Miss Rebecca West, once said, he looked very much like Groucho Marx, except that his mustache was less plausible. It was often difficult for ordinary persons to take him very seriously; and many who did, heartily distrusted him. Among these were some of his associates in the British Labor Party, especially among the old-line trades union leaders. This explains the effort of Mr. Churchill in the election campaign of 1945 to use him as a bugaboo to frighten the voters. The effort, of course, was a failure, but Laski's enemies within the party took advantage of it to ease him out of the chairmanship.

The probability is that Laski was more pleased than not to have the reputation of a ripsnorting revolutionary, a kind of Bloomsbury Marat. There were moments when, like Mr. Wardle's Fat Boy, he seemed to be saying, "I wants to make yer flesh creep!" Perhaps this also explains why until the end of his life he found far more attentive audiences in America than in England, since here new journalistic formulas for making the flesh creep must be found every day.

Of Laski's ultimate place among the political philosophers not much can be said now. One judgment, however, is possible. He moved with the currents of his time, and probably his voice more than any other expressed the dominant mood of the years between 1933 and 1945, much as Rousseau had expressed the mood of the generation that followed his own. Laski, in short, was not one of those great political minds, like Burckhardt's or Tocqueville's, that are able to dissociate themselves from an age and to discern the operation of great historical forces in the evolution of events.

Harassed Refugees

The United States Commissioner of Immigration, Watson B. Miller, has devised an excellent plan for bringing to the attention of Congress the plight of deserving aliens, political refugees and victims of racial and religious prejudice, subject to deportation under existing laws. He has decided to go through the form of arresting and ordering the deportation of Vintila Bratianu, son of a former Prime Minister of Romania, and the members of his family. Mr. Bratianu is a political refugee, sentenced by the present Romanian Communist regime to life imprisonment. Nevertheless, under the law as it stands, he must be deported, since his permit to take up temporary residence in the United States, which has expired, was issued after April 1, 1948.

Of course, the commissioner of immigration has no intention of deporting the Bratianus. If he attempted to enforce the law, an aroused public opinion could be counted on to save the deportees from the fate awaiting them in their native land. The great advantage of bringing a test case of this kind to public attention is that it emphasizes the necessity of remedial legislation to prevent the deportation of victims of political, social and religious persecution who have sought refuge in this country. We need a law broad enough to cover all cases like that of the Bratianus—not measures for the benefit of particular individuals or families.

Preserving Freedom

Marquis Childs, a commentator who ordinarily makes sense, left me both baffled and confused in his "Chipping Away at Freedom," column of March 14. American citizens are called upon to defend our rights against those "frightened and mistrustful men of small and warped minds" who "distrust the democratic process itself" even though "they believe righteously that they are saving the Nation from terrible dangers."

This is a case of misplaced emphasis. There undoubtedly are men so obsessed with the danger to the United States today from Communist imperialism, implemented by aggression abroad and spying at home, that they would have security laws passed that are unnecessary and even do more harm than good. I don't believe that these men are more dangerous to American democracy than the enemy whom they fear, as Mr. Childs expressly states. I have the impression that our trusting disposition has caused us more damage than "panic fear."

As for distrusting the democratic process itself, we wouldn't attempt to conduct a war without stringent security controls, maximum propaganda effort directed at the heart of the enemy, a large spy organization of our own, and coordination of the entire strength of the country under the temporary dictatorial powers of the President; and evidently the men who wrote our Constitution had this same distrust of the democratic process in time of war. Yet can anyone doubt that Russia is already prosecuting war against us in every way she can without provoking the war organization that would deprive her of her advantages over us?

Who Won The War?

It is high time that some indisputable source came out with facts and figures to refute the oft made claims of Navy brass that it was the might of the Navy that crushed Japan and made planned invasion unnecessary.

A good sign, perhaps, is the condescension of Admiral Leahy in his recent book, I Was There, in admitting that the Navy, in beating Japan to her knees, might have had "some" help from the Air Force.

It may be remembered that it was Admiral Leahy, who, as top admiral of the Navy in 1941, told a committee of Congress that the battleship was the "best of all modern weapons."

It might be remembered, also, that in 1941 and for years previously, top Navy brass was desperately opposed to the building of long range bombers for the Air Force which might have made unnecessary the cost in American lives, time, and money of capturing Pacific bases from which the bombers with their politically curtailed range, might operate.

Song Of The Zither

On March 7 there appeared in The Washington Post, an article and a picture of Mr. Jim Moran, holding a zither. I was interested in the article, for as a young girl, I played the zither a good deal. On March 19 in Parade, there appeared a picture of Anton Karas, playing a zither and I believe it is exactly like mine. But there is one difference — mine is over 50 years old.

I came into possession of my zither in my teens. My father procured it for me from a musical instrument house in Cincinnati. My home town lies along the Ohio River in southern Indiana. In that early day, our only connection with the outside world was by boat. Our town was settled by Swiss and Germans who came down the river from Cincinnati and formed the little town of Tell City, named as you may surmise, for the Swiss hero, William Tell.

Itinerant musicians occasionally stopped off at our town and gave concerts. It was from one of these itinerant musicians that I learned to play the zither. They were in town for a few days, but since I had a good musical foundation for the piano, I soon learned to play the zither music at its best, until you have heard it sitting in a skiff (row boat) with a group of young people, drifting down the river, on a moonlit June night.

First Families Of Erin

I want to tell you how much we enjoyed your First Families of Erin page in your March 17 issue. It was so interesting to pick out the different names and places that have become familiar to me, from hearing my Irish-born mother and friends talk about them. And I found my own mother's name on the Armagh map. It was a nice thing for you to do for your Irish readers, and I'd like to say thank you.

As The Steeple Falls

I am sad today as I say goodby to the Washington that I love. For 95 years, from my windows and my lofty steeple, I have watched millions of people of my country, and visiting people from every land on earth, pass by. Many have come within my walls searching for rest and peace from the trials of everyday life, and from the horrors of world trials that had become their own.

I have seen seated within my walls down through the years Presidents and statesmen of this Nation that was destined to become a refuge for many people of many nationalities and many creeds.

I have shared in the happiness of marriage ceremonies, and have welcomed the little new souls taking their places in this life. I have provided the last meeting place with friends for many who have come to the end of life's lane.

I have watched gay throngs pass through our streets in celebration. I have joined in spirit with a people, passing in these same streets, stunned by the tragic deaths of martyred Presidents, mourning the loss of great statesmen, and in grief over victims of war.

I look back with nostalgic yearning over my years of participation in the life of the Capital of this great Nation. May my spirit be allowed to remain here in company with those other edifices of God—the Episcopal Church of the Epiphany, the First Congregational Church, and St. Patrick's Catholic Church—that have served, too, in the heart of downtown Washington for many, many years.

Protection On Import Competition

As chairman of the newly organized National Labor-Management Council on Foreign Trade Policy, may I express to you the position taken by the labor and management groups which make up the council in regard to the impact on certain American industries of the Administration's import policy.

Lower wages than those prevailing in the United States create the principal competitive advantage enjoyed by foreign countries when they ship dutiable merchandise into our domestic market. These lower wage rates often result in lower foreign costs and confer a price advantage upon the shipper to our shores, since his productivity is not generally so far below our own as to offset the lower wages. With the exception of a few products, such as automobiles, that are mass-produced by us, other countries are not very far behind us in productivity and are rapidly catching up in many lines because of the spread of mechanization.

In the meantime, however, and contrary to the theory of classical economists and free trade advocates, the competitive advantages of imported dutiable goods in our domestic market are not generally reducible to superiority of natural resources, soil, climate, or greater efficiency in the countries of origin. Unfortunately they are attributable in some cases to simple exploitation of labor.

Competitive goods that derive their cheapness from this source therefore enter higher-standard countries with a spurious economic advantage rather than a fair one. Instead of spreading the economic benefits often attributed to trade, they undermine the living standards in the higher-standard importing countries.

In order to prevent the destruction of high labor standards and to maintain the possibility of reasonable business profits, a high-standard country is therefore fully justified in taking measures to prevent the economic erosion that may result from unimpeded importation of competitive, as distinguished from complementary, goods from lower-wage countries.

Protective measures that are designed thus simply to place competitive foreign products on a fair competitive level in the market of a high-standard country cannot properly be described as trade barriers or obstacles to the flow of healthy trade. The United States is unique in the world of trade because all other countries operate on a lower wage standard. Nevertheless approximately 60 percent of our imports are now free of duty, consisting largely of noncompetitive items and raw materials. The economic conditions of their production overseas cannot directly undermine our standards and our consumers can enjoy the lower prices without hurting domestic production.

However, the claim of consumers to the enjoyment of lower prices on the 40 percent remainder of our imports, which are competitive goods, is not valid if the lower prices of the latter merely reflect lower wage levels abroad, since such a claim would be based on the destruction of our economic standards.

The postwar economic situation, characterized by an unprecedentedly high national debt, calls for the continuance of an unusually high annual national income, or one of well over 200 billion dollars. This requirement binds us, however unwillingly, to a high price level.

The interests not only of labor and management but also of the public therefore make it imperative that they seek reasonable safeguards against unfair and deflationary foreign competition.

O. STRACKBEIN.
Chairman, National Labor-Management Committee on Foreign Trade Policy.

Matter of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

We're Losing The War

FRANKFURT, GERMANY.—While Washington is distracted with such urgent matters as Senator McCarthy's blatant Red hunt, it is probably hardly worth mentioning that we are losing the Cold War here in Germany. Yet this is the central fact. Unless we take bold preventive measures, we must prepare for defeat in the Cold War here within two or three years at most.

The danger does not lie in such much-publicized menaces as the revival of German nationalism. The danger lies, rather, in the Kremlin's adoption of new Cold War tactics of terror, and in the Kremlin's possession of strength to make those tactics work.

The Russian strength directly threatening Germany is impressive. The Soviet army in the East zone is now a powerful force of 250,000 men. Because they have been liberated from routine occupation duties by the hireling East German police, these Russian troops are wholly engaged in hard combat training. They have recently been receiving important shipments of mechanized and other new equipment. A supporting airfield net, including fields capable of taking the Russian imitation B-29, is now being completed.

In addition, there is the new German army now being created in the East zone, which will eventually comprise 8 to 12 divisions. This force will not perhaps be reliable for serious combat. But it will certainly be good enough to produce the most far-reaching psychological effects in Western Germany.

In the face of these and many other Soviet and satellite armies deployed in Eastern Europe, we are visibly failing to organize any serious defense. Neither the Russians nor the Western Germans are in the least deceived by Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson's loud claims on this point. Their reaction to our weakness is already apparent. The Russian reaction is the project for a new Berlin blockade, of which the Free German Youth rally in Berlin on May 28 is only the beginning. The Kremlin is probably not yet ready for a final showdown. The Berlin project may probably still be aborted by absolute Western firmness. Yet the mere fact that such an astonishingly provocative project has been launched at this time clearly says two things.

FIRST, THE KREMLIN is already feeling the increasing boldness that flows from confidence of superior strength. Second, shows of Russian force and exposures of Western weakness are now to be the chief Kremlin tactic in the Cold War in Europe. It hardly matters whether the Berlin project is aborted, provided the Soviet margin of hard military superiority is permitted to increase still further. In that event, we must soon expect even larger and more threatening demonstrations against us, which we shall be unable to counter.

For this cold warfare of menace, the Western Germans, like the rest of the Western Europeans, are utterly unprepared. A mere failure to defend the exposed Western positions in Berlin will convince every German the Soviet victory is ultimately inevitable. Once that conviction has somehow been conveyed, the vast majority of Germans, although staunchly anti-Communist today, will hasten to come to terms with their prospective new masters.

The Soviets are so sure of the success of their new tactics that they are already hard at work preparing to exploit their anticipated victories. At a recent dinner in Dusseldorff, this correspondent found that each of the seven big industrialists at the table were being almost daily besieged with generous business offers and flattering soft words by East German emissaries of the Soviet high command.

While thus attempting to infiltrate the citadel of the German right wing, the Soviets are also making a concerted effort to destroy the sorely over-burdened West German economy, by pouring in further floods of expellees and refugees from the East. In their forehanded way, they have also organized their own pet extreme right wing party in the East zone. This is the National Democratic Party headed by one of Goebbels' former chief assistants, Lothar Bolz, with the influential Catholic member of the old German general staff, Gen. Vincenz Muller, as party secretary. It is to serve as an East-West bridge when the time comes.

ALL THESE SOVIET efforts and preparations will come to nothing, unless the Western Germans begin to despair. Indeed, despair is the only real danger in Germany. But in the aftermath of the Second World War, and in the dark shadow of Soviet power, the Germans are perilously close to despair already. A single American failure—for the final responsibility is wholly ours—will push the Germans over the dam. Then all of Germany will irresistibly move into the Soviet camp.

This will be defeat, final, total and irrevocable. This, in short, is a problem that deserves the attention of Senator McCarthy, Senator Wherry and the other men like them, who bellow about "Reds" at home and meanwhile, with every vote, continuously forward Soviet purposes abroad.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Mr. Truman And Mr. Acheson

PRESIDENT TRUMAN has had four Secretaries of State during the five years he has been in the White House. The first, Stettinius, he inherited. The other three, Byrnes, Marshall and Acheson, have been his own choice, and few would deny that in each case his standard has been high. But all his Secretaries of State have run into difficulties, and always the crux of the difficulty has been in the relation between the White House and the State Department. The difficulty has turned on the fundamental fact that in the American Government—particularly in an era of crisis—foreign relations can be directed only by the President himself from the White House.

Lippmann

YET MR. TRUMAN, though deeply concerned about the consequences of foreign policy, has had no taste for and little interest in the actual conduct of foreign affairs. Unlike Wilson who had Colonel House and Roosevelt who had Harry Hopkins, Mr. Truman has no one among his intimates and inside the White House who is his alter ego in the conduct of foreign affairs. Thus virtually the whole business of dealing with foreign powers, with the departments which must collaborate, with Congress, and with the press has devolved upon the Secretary of State.

The burden is too great, and as the complexity and scale of our foreign relations has expanded explosively, the burden is intolerable. Mr. Byrnes carried the burden for a while because he had so much political power in his own right. General Marshall carried it for a while because his personal prestige was legendary and he was politically untouchable.

Mr. Acheson is unable to carry the burden. He has inherited a foreign situation which is deteriorating, and demands a review and revision of many of the basic policies of the postwar period. He is himself vulnerable in that if he changes his position at all, he will be attacked as an appeaser; and if he adheres rigidly to his position, the situation abroad will deteriorate still more.

What is required is not the abandonment of our ideal goals and vital objectives but a major change in the strategical plan of our foregin relations. Such a change could only be carried out by a united government under the leadership of the President and in full collaboration with the responsible leaders of the Republican Party.

BUT SINCE Senator Vandenberg's illness, there is no such thing as responsible Republican leadership. There are 42 individual Republicans in the Senate, each requiring, each feeling it is his right, to be informed and consulted on every great issue by the Secretary of State himself. There are also perhaps two hundred correspondents and commentators who have work to do which they find it difficult to do without continual access to the Secretary or someone very near to him. There are half a dozen Cabinet officers who have to be coordinated if foreign policy is to be operated. And there are, I believe, nearly 80 diplomatic missions in Washington who find it awkward to explain to their governments at home that they do not see much of the Secretary of State in Washington. And then there are the Foreign Service and the Department of State itself which have to have some contact with the Secretary.

Obviously it is impossible for the Secretary of State to explain his policies to all the Congressmen, to all the diplomatic missions, to all the newspaper men, to all the eminent citizens. But the attempt, though it cannot succeed, is in itself so exhausting, and requires such tiresome repetition and simplification, that a Secretary of State has to neglect his main business which is to judge the foreign situation and to invent and develop ways of acting. The burden of political leadership, which has fallen on the Secretary of State, and the business of public relations which has grown unmanageably complicated, interfere with, indeed inhibit, his ability to judge and to invent and to create policy. The foreign policy of the United States is today uninspired and inadequate. The Secretary is much too busy to do his real job, and the edge of his mind has been blunted, because he is overwhelmed by having to do all the things that he ought not to have to do at all.

THE SITUATION is bad and as things are now going it could become very bad indeed. It could be improved, however, if the President himself would make relations with Congress in the field of foreign affairs his own, direct, and continuing responsibility. He might well begin by calling upon the Republican opposition to choose two or three Senators whom they trust and will follow, with whom the President and the Secretary of State can then consult and collaborate intimately and continually. For the President and the Secretary of State cannot talk often enough or candidly with 42 separate Republican Senators, some among them at least quite reckless and irresponsible.

It takes two organized parties, each with its recognized leaders, to operate a bipartisan policy. Today neither party is organized. Neither party has leaders in the field of foreign affairs. In this chaos no Secretary of State can function successfully.

Accused by McCarthy . . .

Owen Lattimore, named as McCarthy's "key case"

Lattimore Revealed as 'Mystery Man'

fore the Tydings subcommittee, on another of McCarthy's cases, a curious and doubtless inadvertant clew was dropped that Lattimore's phone is being, or very recently has been, tapped.

It happened this way:

Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) has been acting more or less in the role of McCarthy's counsel or defender, in cross-examining witnesses. He was engaged in this process Monday, when United States Ambassador-at-Large Philip C. Jessup was answering charges made against him the week before.

Jessup had just returned from a round-the-world tour of high diplomatic discussions. He had left Washington in December for the Orient.

In words something like these, Hickenlooper asked Jessup:

"Before your departure, did you have any conversation—any telephone conversation—with Lattimore asking him to accompany you on your trip?"

Jessup Denies Request

Jessup, startled, said he never made any such request of Lattimore, and never "even thought of" the idea.

Hickenlooper, not challenging Jessup's flat and vigorous denial, went on to say something to the effect that, "Then Lattimore could never have said that he 'thought he better not at this time,' since such a telephone conversation never took place."

The indication was fairly obvious, however, that someone had given Hickenlooper a report of an alleged phone call to Lattimore.

Since Jessup never made such a call—he had decided long before his trip to go unaccompanied—the most reasonable explanation is that a wire-tapper misunderstood the content of some other phone conversation.

That other conversation might well have been an invitation from the State Department to Lattimore to meet with Jessup in a conference he had with several other private citizens, to exchange ideas about his forthcoming trip.

Lattimore attended such a conference in December. It is conceivable that he first demurred—in the conversation that appears to have been tapped—and later consented.

After the earlier charges against him, and apparently without knowledge of the later one, Lattimore has requested an opportunity to be heard before the Tydings' subcommittee, it is known.

Tydings Won't Comment

Tydings himself refused to comment on the case last night, pointing out that he was not a "one-man subcommittee." He declined to name the "individual" publicly without consulting other members of the subcommittee.

He may, however, be obliged to say something about it today, when his group meets this morning in open sessions to hear answers of other persons McCarthy has accused.

Mrs. Lattimore, who previously had vehemently denied the earlier public charges against her husband, could not be reached for comment last night.

Lattimore, head of the Walter Hines Page School of International Relations, is one of this generation's most renowned authorities on the Orient. Now 49, his experience in the Far East began when he was 20, in business in Shanghai.

He is a skilled linguist in several Oriental tongues, and has made extensive explorations over many years in Asia. He ranks as America's greatest expert on China's "inner frontier"—the lands that run 4000 miles from her western border to Afghanistan.

He was political adviser to Chiang Kai-shek in 1941-42, and for two years thereafter was deputy director of Pacific Operations in the Office of War Information.

In 1944, Lattimore took leave from the OWI to accompany former Vice President Henry A. Wallace on his survey trip to Siberia and China. He went as translator. His notes, particularly on Wallace's conversations with Chiang Kai-shek, became an important part of the State Department's White Paper on China issued last summer.

Wallace's report on those talks recently became a congressional storm center. Some Republicans contended it was the basis of the Administration's present Far Eastern policy, which they strongly oppose.

While only parts of the report have been made public, the gist was that Chiang should make internal reforms in the Chinese economy to bolster his position, that he should make peace with the Chinese Communists and that he should not offend Russia, then an ally of this country.

He has written 10 books, all on Far Eastern subjects. His latest, "Pivot of Asia," about Sinkiang, was published last week.

Critic of Imperialism

Those books scarcely suggest that the author is pro-Communist. Lattimore has, however, never hesitated to praise Russia for what he considers the sensible development work it has done in the Arctic, and for the policies it pursued in developing Siberian areas, particularly Yarkutia.

He has also been a bitter and consistent critic of colonial imperialism in Asia.

McCarthy's open charge against him rested on his association with two or three organizations later characterized as subversive; his presence on the editorial board of the magazine Amerasia; and finally, on a bitter attack on him by the Rev. James F. Kearney, S. J.

McCarthy did not give Father Kearney's qualifications as a Far Eastern expert, but read a 3700-word article of his that appeared in the Knights of Columbus magazine.

The gist of it was that Lattimore recommended cooperation with the Communist elements in China.

Last Friday, Tydings and his fellow members of the subcommittee were given a "complete analysis" of the FBI files on Lattimore by FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover and by Attorney General McGrath.

The Washington Post has been told that those files do not support, much less confirm, McCarthy's charge that Lattimore is a Soviet agent.

Meantime, Senator Tydings charged yesterday that McCarthy has furnished "no facts, no paper, no action—nothing' to back up his other charges of Communist infiltration in the State Department.

The Maryland Senator indicated on a radio broadcast that, unless loyalty files are obtained from executive departments or McCarthy comes forward with additional information, the subcommittee he heads might have to drop its investigation.

McCarthy, meanwhile, stood on his previous assertions that the loyalty files of the State Department, Civil Service Commission and the FBI will substantiate his charges against more than 100 persons he has described as either State Department employes or formerly connected with the department.

Base Hopes on FBI Chief

Democratic members of the five-man subcommittee appeared to be hopeful that testimony today of J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director, will satisfactorily refute McCarthy's charges.

Tydings said he was hopeful "we will get the files," but added:

"I believe we can get the State Department files and the loyalty files, but I believe there will be a reluctance to turn over the FBI files largely because people who are connected with the FBI are doubtful that this procedure is in the national interest.

"I am very hopeful that Mr. Hoover will touch on this in his testimony before our committee. Mr. Hoover is not a Democrat or a Republican, he's been head of the FBI under both Democratic and Republican administrations. He is completely open and aboveboard and I know he'll be believed."

The key to obtaining all three sets of files lies with President Truman, who to date has remained silent. A White House assistant said in Key West yesterday that the President will wait until Hoover testifies to act on a request made by Tydings last week for the loyalty information.

"I think Mr. Hoover has a reputation for pristine honesty and for patriotism," Tydings said.

"I hope Mr. Hoover will make a statement that will clarify this whole controversy. He is coming at my request because I want to get the best evidence I can for consideration of the American people in this whole matter."

In Congress will be found today on Page B-9.

Loyalty Board Never Subjected To Executive Sway, Chief Says

fired for loyalty reasons, none of whom was deemed guilty of espionage or treason.

"We can take credit," he said, "for a large number of resignations when the loyalty checks were announced. And the man with a questionable background will stay out of Government work."

When he added that he thought the loyalty program had improved the morale of Government employes, he was asked to explain. This improvement, he said, came about when employes who had begun to doubt the loyalty of those about them learned that only 1/10th of one percent actually were discharged for loyalty reasons.

Asked by Mrs. Elizabeth Mae Craig, correspondent for Maine newspapers, if any effort had been made to learn the reasons for large-scale resignations on the eve of loyalty investigations, Richardson said lack of funds had prevented this move. He added that he had recommended to the Civil Service Commission that it seek funds for investigation of these cases by some agency equipped to do so, but without result.

No Public Hearings

In the case of Mrs. Dorothy Bailey, whose appeal from dismissal from a Government job is now before the Supreme Court, Richardson said it was a long-standing rule of the board to grant no public hearings. Mrs. Bailey has demanded such a hearing of her case.

He said the board at the outset determined to hold its hearings in private in order to protect the sources of information. In the Bailey case, he added, only these sources remain unrevealed at the present time.

Richardson blamed information on which charges against certain State Department employes were based by Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) on leaks in the State Department. He said the State Department had been given the routine information that some of its cases were being referred back to it for further consideration and added that he would not have hesitated to give the same information to anyone, since it involved routine procedure.

Nats Hit Bobo's 'Blooper', Beat Chattanooga, 10-7

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., MARCH 26.—In the clubhouse before the game, Bobo Newsom wasn't unhappy. Game time was only 15 minutes distant, and Newsom in a brand new Chattanooga uniform, was hankering to unload his fast ball against the Nats and prove he should be pitching for 'em instead of against 'em.

"It's a nice fit," commented Chattanooga club's equipment man.

POVICH

Bobo scanned himself in the half-length mirror and said "Yeah, but on me it doesn't look good."

"Too tight?" they asked him. "Where does it hurt?"

"Right here across the chest," said Bobo, "that's where it hurts. It's got the wrong lettering. It should read W-A-S-H-I-N-G-T-O-N, not Chattanooga."

Forty minutes later, Newsom was completely unhappy, wounded in spirit, and talking about the nasty people in this world. He'd pitched three innings before they took him out for a pinch-hitter, and the Nats had gotten him for five runs.

Bobo stormed into the dressing room, flung his glove against the locker, and said "I've seen it all, now. That man's trying to keep me off his ball club."

"THAT MAN" obviously was Bucky Harris, who has been resisting Bobo's blandishments all spring and refusing to melt despite his desperate need for pitching on the Washington club. Newsom was confident that he had talked his way past President Clark Griffith, who has given Harris the green light to take on Newsom if he wished.

Bobo, the rivulets of perspiration cascading into a small, artificial lake on the clubhouse floor, was full of talk. "He waits all spring to load up his batting order with eight left-handed hitters to try to show me up on the first day I'm pitching. Why didn't he walk out with an axe and try to chop my head off."

It was true. Whether by accident or design, Harris did confront the righthanded Newsom with every left-handed hitter he could muster. If it was by accident, it was a whopper. If it was deliberate, Harris was overlooking no trick to expose Newsom as no help to the club with Griffith looking on.

ACTUALLY BOBO didn't pitch badly. He complained, and rightfully, that the Nats were entitled to only two runs off him. His center fielder messed up a fly ball that drove in two runs, and a third scored on what should have been a double play ball.

However, Bobo was somewhat impolitic in his work if he was trying to pitch himself into the good graces of Harris. He struck out Irv Noren the first time up with two on base. And Noren is Harris' own $70,000 purchase. Obviously, Bucky could not feel kindly toward a guy who did that.

Newsom was railing, too. Against Gil Coan, who helped the Nats get a run by dragging a bunt past the lumbering Bobo and beating it out. "That's fine business," said Bobo, "trying to rub it in on me with a drag bunt against our kind of an infield. I guess he got his orders.

Orders or no orders, Coan wasn't exempted from Bobo's wrath." I yelled so he could hear it," said Newsom, "that if he could get away with those bunts in midseason when it counted, he might hit .270, but he'd have to keep bunting to hit that much."

IF HARRIS HAS succeeded in eliminating Newsom from the Washington club's pitching plans, at least temporarily, his first objective has been attained.

He confesses that if his pitching becomes too dismal, there will be need to call Newsom up from Chattanooga. But until until that crisis actually presents itself, Harris is content to go happily along without the Bobo.

Meanwhile, Newsom is Joe Engel's problem. Engel, the Chattanooga president, gave Newsom a bonus for signing last season and he wound up as the highest-paid player in the Southern Association, making more money than all but one of the Washington pitchers. This season, Newsom comes within the salary limit and Engel hopes to keep him happy in the fiscal department.

"We'll work something out," said Engel, "and I have an idea Newsom will do all right. The other day he interviewed the Yankees for a Chattanooga radio station. I thought he was just being a nice guy. Now I hear he's billing them for talent fees."

Gonzales Brushes Past Kramer To Win Inquirer Pro Title

Philadelphia, March 26 (AP).—Richard Alonzo (Pancho) Gonzales upset first seeded Jack Kramer in straight sets, 7—5, 6—3, 6—4 today to win the Philadelphia Inquirer's $10,000 world's indoor professional tennis tournament.

The swarthy 21-year-old former U. S. amateur champion demonstrated the inspiring brand of tennis that helped Uncle Sam win the Davis Cup last year as he blasted the favored Kramer into submission. Gonzales' exhibition was one of power, precision and heady play.

He gained the upper hand from the outset and never let Kramer regain the offensive.

Gonzales, who in his recent transcontinental tour of exhibitions with Kramer was able to win about one in four tries, had it today and picked up $1584 in first place money for his splendid effort.

Kramer, apparently tired from his strenuous semifinals triumph over Frank Kovacs, netted $1,056 in second place money.

The two Californians now have met 92 times as professionals, with Gonzales trailing by the unimpressive score of 71 to 21. But the 4800 fans at the arena never would have guessed about the Kramer mastery over his colorful opponent on the basis of the tennis played today.

Five times Gonzales broke Kramer's serve in the first set and he totaled seven aces with his smashing serve.

The former Navy deck swabber clinched the initial set with a placement down the line as Big Jack stood open mouthed. Gonzales whipped home an ace to climax the 6—3 second set and ended the match in the deciding set with another unreturnable serve.

Gonzales teamed up with Francisco (Pancho) Segura to win the doubles championship and the $1584 first money. The Panchos beat Kovacs and Welby Van Horn 6—2, 4—6, 6—3, 10—8 in four sets Preacher Roe, Erv Palica and Willard Ramsdell pitched for Brooklyn, giving up 10 hits among them.

The Dodgers' Gene Hermanski, Jackie Robinson, Carl Furillo and Roy Campanella got on base 19 times among them.

Collins Wanted To Shift Bulldogs To Buffalo

Buffalo, N. Y., March 26 (AP).—Owner Ted Collins said yesterday he had tried unsuccessfully to transfer his New York Bulldogs, national football league franchise to Buffalo.

"I tried to bring the Bulldogs here within the last week, but I was refused," said Collins. "The commissioner (Bert Bell) told me to forget about it, that he had polled five owners and my application to move was rejected."

"Does it make any sense to keep a team like Green Bay where they are conducting a house-to-house canvass for funds to keep the team solvent, and yet turn down a city like Buffalo, or say no to Houston's Glenn McCarthy, who has 70 million dollars?" he asked.

Kiner's Wrist Injury Has Bucs Upset

San Francisco, Calif., March 26 (AP).—Officials of the Pittsburgh Pirates are worried over their biggest asset, Ralph Kiner.

Kiner has been sidlined since March 14, when he suffered a severely sprained right wrist in a collision at first base in an exhibition game with the Chicago White Sox at San Bernardino, Calif.

Today the husky Pirate left fielder, who led the majors with 54 homers last year took a few swings in the batter's cage for the first time since the injury. He managed to clout one over the fence, but he was swinging with only one hand on his follow through.

Kiner didn't have much to say although he admitted he wasn't able to snap his right wrist.

2d Notre Dame Student Dies of Injury in Sports

South Bend, Ind., March 26 (AP). A 22-year-old Notre Dame student died in St. Joseph's Hospital here today of injuries suffered last Monday while playing handball.

The victim, John Donahue, jr., of Oak Park, Ill., was the second student at Notre Dame to die of an athletic injury in six weeks.

Ray Espenan, a varsity football player from New Orleans, died in the same hospital February 23 of a broken neck suffered in a gymnastic exhibition at South Bend Central High School.

University officials said Donahue suffered a head injury when he crashed into a wall while playing handball at the Rockne Memorial Fieldhouse.

A junior law student, Donahue walked to the university infirmary after the accident but collapsed three hours later. He never regained consciousness.

while Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C., finished fourth with 281.

The largest gallery in the history of the Open—some 15,000 persons—followed Snead under cloudy skies as his steady play kept him ahead of the hot field today.

"I'm not playing unusual golf—just consistent," he said at the end of the day's first round. "This is one of my favorite tournaments, and I always have more luck here than anywhere else."

Snead, already the Nation's top money winner on the winter circuit, added another $2000 to his earnings today. It brought his total to $12,908.

Winner of last year's British Open crown, Snead said he would not play in England this summer.

"I never intend to go there again," he said. "The play is too slow and uninteresting, and I don't like the way they play golf."

Snead became the first player to win the tournament two years in succession and the first to win four times.

Jim Turnesa, Briar Cliff, N. Y., finished with two 69s today for 280 and third place.

Fan, 13, Skips Home to Visit With Players

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

PHILLIP HARROLD
Baseball's his world . . .

Knoxville, Tenn., March 26 (AP).—The parents of young Phillip Harrold, the baseball fan, speculated today that he may have made connection in the Grapefruit circuit.

But all Prof. and Mrs. O. G. Harrold knew for sure was that their 13-year-old son with freckles on his nose and a short haircut had played big league hooky from school and home since Tuesday.

They anxiously questioned his close friends, hoping to turn up a clue to the direction he took.

Ditching latin and algebra, Phil skipped school and cleaned out his $130 savings account. "I'm going to baseball camp," he told the bank teller.

"A bat boy's job probably is his immediate aim," said Professor Harrold, who teachers mathematics at the University of Tennessee. "I suspect he'd like to carry Ted Williams' bat."

Syracuse Tops Knicks, 91-83 In Overtime

Syracuse, N. Y., March 26 (AP)—The Syracuse Nationals trimmed the New York Knickerbockers, 91-83, tonight in an overtime National Basketball Association playoff game. The victory gave Syracuse a 1-0 edge in the best-of-three series for the Eastern playoff title.

The two teams play again at New York Thursday for the right to represent the Eastern Division in the remainder of the playoffs.

The score was knotted at 77-77 at the end of regulation time. John Macknowski sank a field goal in the last 15 seconds to give the Nationals a 77-76 edge. He was fouled on the play, but missed the shot.

Carl Braun, New York forward, took the rebound and drove in for a shot. He, too, was fouled, and was awarded two free throws. Braun missed the first attempt but dropped in the second

Gussie, Pat Todd Win Doubles

Alexandria, Egypt, March 26 (AP). Gorgeous Gussie Moran of Santa Monica, Calif., was on the winning side in the women's doubles and the mixed doubles teams today in the Alexandria international tennis championships.

Miss Moran teamed up with Mrs. Patricia Canning Todd of La Jolla, Calif., to defeat Mrs. Annalisa Bossi of Italy and Hongkong-born Miss Gem Hoahing, 6—4, 7—5, in the doubles championship. She then teamed up with veteran Adrian Quist of Australia and defeated Jaroslav Drobny, self-exiled Czech, and Mrs. Mary Weiss of Argentina, 6—2, 6—0, in the mixed doubles.

Mr. Newsom Is Wild, Too; Vollmer Gets Home Run

by Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., March 26—The Nats today established a fact—that they are the best club in their own farm system, but not by much, it could be added. Their Chattanooga chattels threw a fright into the main office by stirring up four runs in the ninth before accepting a 10-7 defeat.

It was the day for the unveiling of Bobo Newsom in a Chattanooga uniform, and the Nats were happy to have him around. It was against Newsom in the first three innings that they amassed a quite necessary 5-2 lead.

They didn't exactly bombard Newsom who, when he chose to unload his fast ball, was hot stuff. Three of their five hits off him occurred when he chose to throw his semi-bloopers, but he was wild in too many spots and walked four.

Newsom's lack of control was quite unsurprising to those who know Bobo best and could apologize for him. "He was pitching with one eye on the batter and one eye watching Clark Griffith's reactions," it was announced semiofficially in the press box.

He Watched Griff, Not Nats

The Nats conked him for three runs after he walked the first two batters. He saved face at that point by striking out Irv Noren on a fast ball, but was the victim of Eddie Robinson's triple a moment later. It drove in two runs, but was somewhat tainted by center fielder Varner's indecision. Varner played the ball into a three-bagger.

The Nats needed those runs to wipe out a 2-0 lead the Lookouts had gained off Mickey Harris in the first innig when Hal Harrigan doubled with two on. Harris settled down after that and breezed through four scoreless innings before he retired .

All told, though, their farmhands outhit the Nats, 13 to 10. Against Cuban Connie Marrero in the last four inings, they rapped seven hits and five runs. Marrero's stock among the rookie pitchers dropped somewhat as a result.

Harrigan's the Name

The free-swinging Harrigan who moved up to Chattanooga after hitting 44 homers for Anderson, S. C., in the Tri-State League last year, left his mark on Tinker Field in the ninth inning. He walloped a three-run homer over the fence in almost dead center that the natives declared was the longest clout in years.

Bucky Harris didn't send his full varsity into action against the Lookouts, but he did load it up with eight left handed hitters against Newsom at the outset.

The Nats came up with their biggest inning in the fifth, a four-run splurge against right hander Royce Chandler that was featured by a home run smash by Clyde Vollmer.

For the second consecutive day, a Washington pinch hitter, Vollmer, knocked the ball out of the park. In matching Gil Coan's pinch homer of the day before, Vollmer parked one of Chandler's pitches over the scoreboard in deep left center.

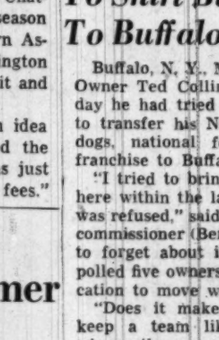
IN SHORT . . . for Young Hal Keller, fourth-string catcher of the Nats, it was a notable afternoon. He singled a run home in the fifth with his first hit after eight fruitless appearances as a pinch hitter . . . Young Jim Jarrett who held the Nats to two hits and one run in the last two innings, was tracked down and signed by Scout Cecil Travis after setting Georgia schoolboy circles afire last year . . . Newsom complained of sinus trouble before the game . . . At the end of his three-inning chore, Harris conceded that "Bobo can still fire that ball and we may find use for him." . . . Actually, Newsom has not yet signed with Chattanooga, but that will be a formality . . . Tomorrow, the Nats trek back to the West Coast to take on the Phils at Clearwater.

For Getting Them Pensions

Battling Nelson Sympathizer Suggests Spanish-American War Vets Give $1 Each

An old friend of Battling Nelson came forward yesterday with a suggestion that every living Spanish-American War veteran contribute $1 to the one-time world lightweight boxing champion.

William Patrick Armstrong, 74, a Spanish-American veteran who lives at 621 3d st. nw., said:



ARMSTRONG

"Almost every Spanish-American veteran receives a pension of $90 a month. If it wasn't for Nelson they wouldn't be getting that kind of a pension. Giving Old Bat $1 would be the best dollar each of these veterans ever spent.

Nelson, 67, recently applied to the Veterans' Administration for a pension as a Spanish-American War veteran. His application was rejected because no records of his service could be found.

The Battler knocked out Joe Gans in 17 rounds in 1908 to win the lightweight crown. He is probably the only boxer living who has fought two bouts of 40 or more rounds in duration.

In 1906 Nelson lost on a foul to Gans in the forty-second round and lost the title to Ad Wolgast by a knockout in the fortieth round of their bout in 1910.

Armstrong, white-haired and well-preserved related how he knew Nelson well in the early 1900's in Washington, and how Bat helped the Spanish-American veterans get their pension:

"Nelson was the kind of a fellow who could talk with a President. He was on friendly terms with President Teddy Roosevelt, who was a good boxer himself and a fight fan.

When the Sells bill, calling for pensions, was introduced in Congress, Nelson put up $1000 to help get the bill passed.

"That money was spent principally for taking pictures of injured veterans so that Congress could see the evidence of how badly they needed help.

"One of those pictures showed a veteran who had lost both arms and used his mouth for picking up paper scraps in order to earn a little money

"When members of Congress saw those pictures, they passed the pension bill in a hurry.

"If Bat Nelson hadn't put up that $1000 the pension might have been a lot different from what the Spanish-American veterans got. That bill covered injuries not contracted in the line of duty.

"Bat always was interested in soldiers. Maybe that was because his parents wouldn't sign papers to let him serve in the Spanish-American war. He had his uniform and everything but, as I recall, he was too young.

"So when the Sells bill came up, he pitched in to help out.

"Today there are about 50,000 surviving Spanish-American War veterans. Each of them could chip in a $1 for Bat, mailing it to any Spanish-American camp (or post), or direct to Nelson at Hegwisch Station, Chicago, Ill."

Keene Fights Sipio Lofton Here Tonight

Sipio Lofton, conqueror of local fighters, will attempt to add another District boy to his string tonight when he clashes with Julian Keene in a scheduled 10-round light-heavyweight scrap at Turner's Arena.

Lofton, who originates from Baltimore but has been fighting out of New York, has defeated Washington's Ken Stribling in an eight-rounder at Atlantic City and scored a six-round kayo over Garland Edwards.

Ring Magazine lists Sipio as one of the top men in the light heavyweight class because of his record of 33 wins in 41 fights against only five losses and three draws.

Lofton was selected as an opponent for Keene when Roland Randall injured his right hand in training for the match and was ordered to layoff for about a week. The Randall-Keene bout was to be for the local 175-pound title.

Keene knocked out Al Winn and upset Joe Blackwood in his last two battles.

Tonight's supporting card features the pro debut of Eddie Gilchrist, former national amateur bantamweight champion, who meets Lou Yonkers, of Virginia, in a five-round semifinal match.

Another five-rounder lists welterweight Roy Wirt against Ralph Brown. In fours it's Jimmy O'Brien vs. Angelo Marini, middleweights, and Lucky Fitzgerald against Frank Ball, also middleweights. Another four is being arranged, and the first bout gets underway at 8:45 o'clock.

Court Rules Racing Illegal In California

Los Angeles, March 26 (AP).—Assistant Attorney General Kenneth Lynch said today he definitely will petition the State Supreme Court to review an Appellate Court ruling handed down yesterday outlawing pari-mutuel horse racing in California.

By declaring California's horse racing act unconstitutional, the District Court of Appeal has thrown the entire racing situation into confusion.

Lynch said the tracks will probably be permitted to operate normally until action is taken by the Supreme Court or in a special session of the State legislature.

The law ruled illegal by the three-judge court is the basic statute for the State's multimillion-dollar racing industry. It governs pari-mutuel betting and licensing of such tracks as Santa Anita, Hollywood Park, Tanforan and Del Mar.

Lynch represents the racing board in the case. He admitted that a continuance of the State's present racing program will be illegal under the Appellate Court ruling and that the racing plants could be shut down by a taxpayer's suit.

Lynch said he plans to advise the racing board to have all pari-mutuel money placed in a special fund pending further court action.

Albert Pearson, attorney for A. J. Uniack, Los Angeles businessman and president of the Southern California Jockey Club said as things stand now, horse racing in California is illegal.

Terps, W. & L. Play in 1951

Lexington, Va., March 26 (AP).—Washington and Lee University and the University of Maryland will resume a two-game, home-and-home football series beginning at W. & L.'s Wilson Field in 1951, it was revealed today by Capt. R. A. (Dick) Smith, W. & L. athletic director.

"I am particularly anxious to resume a football rivalry with Washington and Lee now that George Barclay is head coach there," James Tatum, head football coach and athletic director at the University of Maryland. Said Barclay served as Tatum's line coach at Maryland prior to Barclay being named head football coach at W. & L. in 1948.

Silver Spring Wins VFW Title

Silver Spring Post 2562 defeated the District All-Stars Post, 65 to 51, yesterday in the deciding contest of a three-game cup series for the Veterans of Foreign Wars title, at Blair High. Silver Spring also won the Maryland State VFW title Saturday by beating Frederick, 51-38.

Brothers Ehlman and Don Hillock were the stars yesterday with 17 and 14 points. Bud Roundtree's 14 topped the losers.

In a preliminary game, the Maryland All-Stars beat out the District All Stars, 67-64.

Phillips Oilers Regain AAU Title

Denver, March 26 (AP).—The mighty Phillips Oilers overwhelmed the Oakland Blue 'n' Golds, 65-42, last night to win back the National AAU championship.

The smashing victory returned the fast-breaking Oklahomans to the AAU throne they had occupied for six straight seasons, before Oakland upset them, 55-51, in the finals of last year's tournament at Oklahoma City.

Beavers Favored in Title Game

By Will Grimsley

New York, March 26 (AP).—Bradley's vengeance-bent Braves will get another chance Tuesday night to break up City College of New York's port-season basketball honeymoon.

The betting is they won't be able to do it—that city's amazing Beavers, having proved they're no "flash in the pan," will go down as the first team in history to win both the big national tournaments in a single season.

Bradley, No. 1 in the national ratings, and CCNY, unranked and unnoticed until they caught fire two weeks ago, will clash at Madison Square Gerden for the NCAA championship.

The conditions will be different than March 18 when they played for top honors in the National Invitation. That time Bradley, the team of poised and polished veterans, was a favorite. But it was CCNY's enthusiastic sophomores who won, 69-61.

CCNY Four-Point Favorite

Since then Nat Holman's Athletics, wearying perhaps, have shown no inclination to fade or grow stale. They won the Eastern NCAA playoffs Saturday night at the Garden by beating a very good North Carolina State team in the finals, 78-73.

Bradley, meanwhile, had a slightly closer squeak in the Western finals at Kansas City, narpion, 68 to 66. The score was tied 11 times.

City's Beavers figure to be a three-or-four-point favorite when the NCCA finalists face off at around 10:15 p. m. (EST.) Tuesmeet in a consolation preliminary.

The last two weeks have been fantastic ones for CCNY, which finished the campaign with a lack-lustre record and got into the invitation only because of a blown-up field (12 teams instead of 8) and the need for home talent.

After the Beavers swept to the invitation title they were picked for the District 2 spot in the NCAA. Two weeks ago it was 100-1 against them.

In their sensational post-season binge, the Beaves have beaten five of the country's six top-ranked teams—Bradley, No. 1; Ohio State, No. 2; Kentucky, No. 3; N. C. State, No. 5, and Duq. esne, No. 6.

The fourth-ranked team—Holy Cross—was a victim of N. C. State, beaten by CCNY in the NCAA finals.

Terps Play Rutgers Today

George Case, former big league speed merchant, makes his debut as a college baseball coach this afternoon at College Park when his Rutgers University team meets Maryland—and the one-time Nat hopes to get off to a flying start.

Case, because of bad weather, has not had a good look at his pitchers. Against the Terps this afternoon he plans to use Herm Hering, an outfielder who pitched one game last season. That was against Princeton and he shut out the Tigers on six hits.

Terrapin Mentor Burt Shipley has a hole in the infield at short-stop, left vacant by Bobby Brewer. Chief candidates are John Noske and Dick Koffenberger. Jim Moeller at first, Eddie Crescenze at second and Johnny Hunton at third, round out the infield.

Tony Sielo is the only new face in the outfield. He is filling Al Cesky's shoes. Joe Bryant and Gene Emsweller are Sielo's flankers.

Johnny Condon will be behind the plate and will provide a target for a stock of good pitchers that includes Nick Panella, Norm Geatz, Bucky Loomis and Dan Wagner.

At Laurel

Dear Folks:

Jockey Maurice (Moose) Peters is making a comeback. He retired once and went to training, only to be suspended on a cruelty charge. But that's water over the dam now. He's no spring chicken but he's all business now that he's in good standing and all hands are pulling for him to make the grade. I like the story about Jockey Henri Mora who was reducing at Hialeah. The jockey room attendant put him in the "sweat box" and, being called elsewhere, forgot about the rider. Mora, after 20 minutes yelled for help and a friend released him. The attendant returned to the box and was shocked at not finding Mora. He phoned the stewards and said "Mora will not be able to ride today. He reduced to a puddle of water." Bill.

Middies Win Dinghy Races

Annapolis, Md., March 26 (AP).—Navy squeezed out a narrow victory today over three other colleges in the season's opening dinghy regatta on the Severn River.

The Middies went into the last race tied with the University of Maryland at 30-30, but Skipper Chuck Robertson beat out Jack Martin of Maryland to give Navy a final total of 35 points. Martin, with lady crew member Nina Hecker, brought his boat in second to give Maryland 34 points.

Haverford was third with 25 and Lafayette last with 18.

Maryland and Navy fought neck and neck throughout the regatta which was sailed in 45-degree temperatures and at one time in a sleet-like rain. The wind was northeast from flat calm to five knots.

Leading skippers were Maryland's Pete Geif and Martin. As the Terps' only entries, they racked up 17 points apiece.

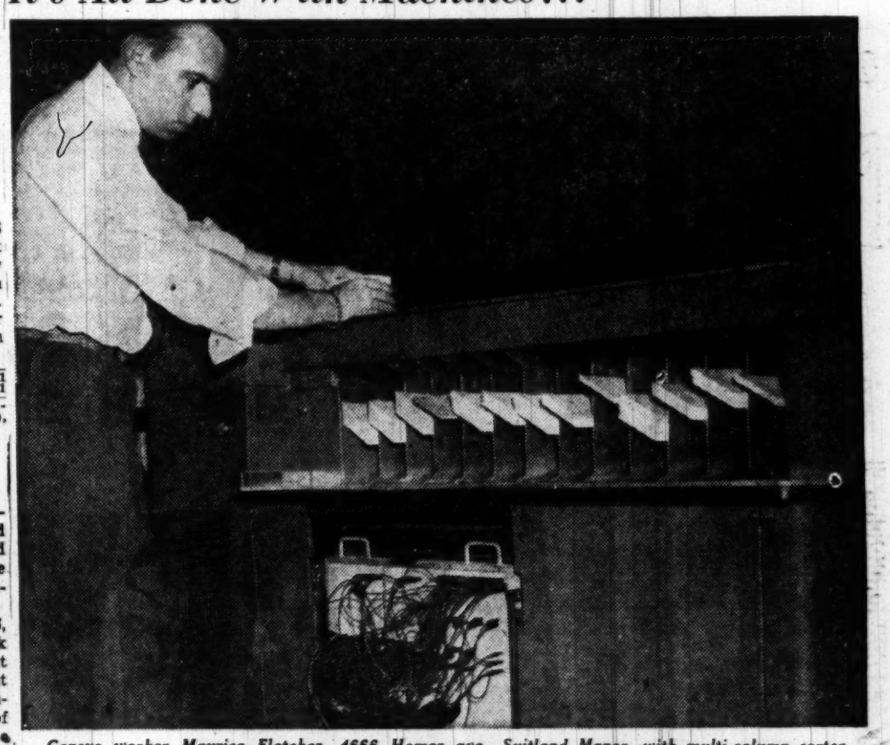
It's All Done With Machines . . .



Census worker Maurice Fletcher, 4666 Homer ave., Suitland Manor, with multi-column sorter

Census Data Is Mechanized

a billion cards will be used and it will take almost a year to punch them all.

Each card is "verified"—put into a second machine and punched a second time by another girl just to see if the right holes were cut. If anyone is wrong, the electric puncher rejects the card and a new one is punched. Census says the error margin is less than 2 percent.

These hand operations are the big bottlenecks of the census compilation. From here on it's all done by electronics. If it weren't, it would take a generation to do the job by hand.

The sorters will be kept running for nearly two years. Some are single column sorters, the kind that sorts out male cards from female cards or divorced from widowed. It's all done, of course, by brushes or "electric fingers which feel for the holes and thus drop the cards in the proper stacks.

Multi-column sorters (Census has 26 of these to 128 of the single type) will sort out all married males in one stack, single males in another, divorced males in a third and so on.

Finally comes the tabulators. These machines add up totals of the cards run through and print them on endless sheets of paper which are ready for turning into the final printed tables of statistics.

Wonders Never Cease

The numeric tab will total up such things as all the wages received in Pennsylvania or how much rent was paid last year in Utah. Another tab can total all the women by age groups or tell you how many plumbers there are in Maryland between 50 and 55 years of age.

Electronic wonders never cease, however. Census is awaiting the arrival of 43 new machines built especially by International Business Machines. These mechanical brains will both sort and add, a tremendous time saver.

They won't mean less jobs at Census, however, according to Emil Marecki, assisvtant chief of the machine tab division. Instead, the same number of workers will be able to turn out thousands of additional columns of figures.

Foe of Census Income Query Promises Last-Minute Battle

By The Associated Press

Representative Clarence J. Brown (R., Ohio) yesterday said he has mustered strong bipartisan support for a last-minute fight to block the Census Bureau from inquiring into the people's finances in the census starting April 1.

"When the Census Bureau sends 168,000 political hacks and ward heelers out into the country to snoop into the people's finances, it is thumbing its nose at the Bill of Rights," he said in a prepared statement.

Brown said a group of House Republicans and Democrats plans to back him this week in an effort to amend the Census Bureau's appropriation to forbid the asking of the financial questions.

Brown's fire is concentrated on the bureau's plans to ask every fifth family in the country the sources and amounts of its income.

His prepared statement said he is convinced the bureau has no legal right to ask the questions or to punish anybody who refuses to answer the queries. But he added that "I'm not advising anybody to answer or not to answer. That's up to them."

He said there is evidence that the census is being used as a "giant political melon."

"Instead of being the scientific survey it should be for the price (about 92 million dollars), it was regenerated into a prize source of political patronage," he added.

Marines Will Play At Templars' Arlington Service

The Marine Band will provide the marching music for thousands of Knights Templar who will participate in the Easter Sunrise Services April 9 in the amphitheater at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington Cemetery.

Richard E. Titlow, chairman, said yesterday that Dr. John C. Palmer, grand chaplain of the Grand Commandery for the District, will offer the opening prayer, and Dr. Edgar C. Powers, of Baltimore, will deliver the main sermon. Dr. Powers is sovereign grand inspector general of the Supreme Council. Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry, for Maryland.

Robert B. Gaylord of San Francisco, grand master of Knights Templar of the United States, and his staff will be honor guests at the event which is held annually by the Grand Encampment of Templars.

Bid Declined By Engravers

AFL photo-engravers employed by three Washington daily newspapers yesterday voted unanimously to send a publishers' wage proposal back to negotiation, a union official reported.

The engravers' union is negotiating for a new contract with the Star, Times-Herald and Daily News. Engravers for the Washington Post are covered by a separate contract with the Advertisers Engraving Service, Inc.

The proposal would have increased the present wage differential between night and day shifts by raising the night shift pay, according to Earl H. Harding, president of Local 17, International Photo-Engravers Union. The local, which represents 46 newspaper engravers, met at the Burlington Hotel.

The present wage scale, under a contract which expired February 1, is $100.25 for the 37½ hour day shift, $4.50 added differential for the 35 hour first night shift, and $5.50 differential for the 35 hour second night shift.

ANY CAVITIES LAST YEAR?
CHANGE YOUR TOOTH PASTE

Millions have changed to Ammoniated tooth paste for fewer cavities—less tooth decay!

Save your children pain and grief of decay

Surely you want to do everything in your power to help your children have stronger, healthier teeth—and avoid the pain of cavities.
You can help, by giving your children ammoniated toothpaste—Amm-i-dent Toothpaste, to help prevent cavities every time they brush their teeth. Think of the pain and expense you might have been saved if Amm-i-dent had been discovered when you were a child!
Children love the clean, pleasant flavor of Amm-i-dent—both toothpaste and the powder. And, remember, you can depend on Amm-i-dent, for Amm-i-dent has been tested and commended by Parents' Magazine's Consumer Service Bureau.

Here is Amm-i-dent Proof:

1. *Sworn dental records of decay reduction!
In rigid, scientific 3-year test with hundreds of men, women and children, sworn dental records prove better than 40% decay reduction with Amm-i-dent.

2. Dental journals publish proof!
The Amm-i-dent formula can show proof, published in leading dental journals, that it actually reduced tooth decay.

3. Reader's Digest, Time, Parents'!
Leading magazines and newspapers investigated Amm-i-dent claims, spread the news of the proven record of decay reduction.

4. More dentists recommend Amm-i-dent!
Completely impartial, certified records prove: More dentists today recommend Amm-i-dent than any other dentifrice made.

5. 1949 users report amazing results!
Letters on file from 1949 Amm-i-dent users, after last dental check-up, add further proof of Amm-i-dent's power to reduce decay.

*NOTARY PUBLIC'S STATEMENT: "I have seen the actual dentist's records and the dentist's sworn statement of the decay reduction in each case."

Evelyn A. Roman
Notary Public, State of New York

"NO CAVITIES AT LAST CHECK"

Mrs. Rose Kovel, of Jackson Heights, N. Y., who has three children, says, "My whole family has been using Amm-i-dent regularly with wonderful results. Our rates of new cavity formation have steadily decreased, until, at our last check-up, none of us had a single new cavity! You can't do better than that!"

Mr. Benjamin Lucatorto, of the Bronx, N. Y., says, "My son and I have been watching the results of our faithful use of Amm-i-dent. At every six months' check we found we had fewer cavities, but last time we were delighted to hear our dentist report, 'No new cavities for either of you!' I call that real results."

Miss Joan Hughes, nurse, of Little Neck, L. I., reports "Before I changed to Amm-i-dent my dentist found new cavities almost every time I visited him, no matter how careful I was. Since using Amm-i-dent I've had fewer and fewer cavities, and none at all for the last six months!"

The persons shown above participated in Amm-i-dent clinical research

Amm-i-dent and your dentis.

Although Amm-i-dent's ammoniated formula is the most effective known for fighting tooth decay, no dentifrice can guarantee absolute freedom from cavities, nor can it repair damage already done. Amm-i-dent, as proven by all the evidence, is an important weapon in your fight against decay, but proper brushing habits and a sensible diet are important, too.

Most of all, the professional help and guidance of your dentist is necessary for the complete guardianship of your dental health. Make it a rule to visit your dentist regularly for a check-up.

Amm-i-dent Powder, Too!

Amm-i-dent comes in both Paste and Powder form. The Powder sells at the new low price of 47¢, contains 3 times more ammoniated anti-decay ingredients than any other brand.

Amm-i-dent Formula Proven to Reduce Decay with 4 out of 5 Users!

"My mouth never felt so clean—My smile never looked so bright"

That's what Wendy Wells, New York model, wrote to the Amm-i-dent Company, after using Amm-i-dent Toothpaste to safeguard her pretty smile.
"You can imagine," she continued, "how happy I am to find a toothpaste that helps prevent cavities—and does all these things as well!"
Everybody wants a toothpaste to taste good, clean their teeth and check oral bad breath. With Amm-i-dent you get all that, plus the great extra benefit of ammoniated protection against tooth decay. No wonder millions of people have changed to Amm-i-dent in the past year—more than to all other toothpastes combined.
Get Amm-i-dent Toothpaste today and make it available to every member of your family. We're confident that you will say, as Miss Wells and many, many others have said, "My mouth never felt so clean—my smile never sparkled so before."

Dentists Acclaim Amm-i-dent... Recommend It More Than Any Other Dentifrice

If you are using a non-ammoniated toothpaste, and yet hope to reduce tooth decay, bear this in mind: you are missing the single greatest advance in home dental care to come along in years... the ammoniated dentifrice... Amm-i-dent!

Dental scientists have proven that Amm-i-dent's ammoniated formula reduced decay... proven it reduced decay by almost half in the case of four out of five people who used it!

How Amm-i-dent Works

Dental researchers found that tooth decay was always accompanied by a certain bacteria (lactobacillus acidophilus).

How could this bacteria "villain" be curbed? After years of work Amm-i-dent scientists discovered this: by using dibasic ammonium phosphate and carbamide, two ingredients new to dentifrices, they could dramatically reduce the count of the bacteria in the mouth. (Ordinary ingredients that just "alkalized" the mouth didn't work.)

The first dentifrice with these ingredients was Amm-i-dent Tooth Powder. A test plan was worked out. Dental patients with records going back eleven years were enlisted in the great experiment. For three years they brushed with Amm-i-dent. Another group used their regular "cosmetic" dentifrice.

Astounding Results

Then the startling results were known: 4 out of 5 of the Amm-i-dent users reduced decay by almost 50%. Those who used a regular dentifrice showed no significant change!

Leading dental journals reported the results! Magazines like Reader's Digest, Time, Newsweek, investigated—wrote exciting articles! And the dentists of America recommended Amm-i-dent in such numbers that today it is their No. 1 choice!

How To Avoid Confusion

If you are confused by all you've read about tooth decay, remember: to get this revolutionary new protection against tooth decay for your family you must have an ammoniated dentifrice. Look for the words "Dibasic Ammonium Phosphate and Carbamide." These new anti-decay ingredients are vitally necessary to give you ammoniated protection against tooth decay.

If you are using today the same toothpaste you used last year, your toothpaste is not ammoniated. It cannot give you this protection. It can do no more to prevent cavities than it could last year. So don't delay. Change your toothpaste. Change to Amm-i-dent. Remember, in 1949 more people changed to Amm-i-dent Toothpaste than to all other toothpastes combined!

Johnson Says Hospital Cutback Will Release Up to 11,000 Persons

Defense Secretary Johnson has informed Congress that his hospital cutback program will release up to 11,000 persons, half of whom will be civilians. About 500 doctors will be shifted to other assignments during the reductions.

STORY: This apocryphal story is being told in Government offices. A high school senior who had decided on a Government career visited a top Federal official to seek his advice on how to succeed in Government. The official thought for awhile and then told the boy:

"I suggest that you go through Harvard College and then turn left."

BOUQUET: Philip Hauser, who was then acting director of the Census Bureau, defended Census' budget before the House Appropriations Committee. During the hearing he stated he was a "college professor."

Representative Flood (D., Pa.) then made this pointed comment: "In this city, that is a brave admission, because it has been the practice in certain areas to condemn, vilify and abuse your brothers, creating the impression you are dunces, fools, charlatans, and frauds. I have yet to see a bureau chief make a presentation similar to the one you made on such an important subject as this. I think you are a shining example of the contribution that the ivory tower of the university campus can make to administrative government."

POSTOFFICE: The House Appropriations Committee suggested that it give "careful consideration" to the employment of industrial engineers to make a thorough study of the department's equipment and methods. It believes the department should mechanize more of its work.

The committee gave the department a slash of $24,921,000 in its operations budget. The largest part of that budget goes to pay salaries. The budget slash, if it stands, could mean a new reduction of upward of 5000 postal workers.

Among other actions of the House committee were: that the Women's Bureau be allowed to reestablish its field offices . . . That the Office of Education reduce its "excessive" over-all administrative staff of 70 employes . . . That no part of the budget cut given the Bureau of Employes' Compensation be applied to its investigative staff . . . That the Employe Health Service Program of the Public Service be slashed from $181,900 to $50,000. The agency health programs will be hamstrung if the reduction goes through.

That the Agriculture Department make its reductions without the complete closing or liquidation of any field station . . . That its Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine needs better planning, organization and administration . . . The committee provides funds for 10 housing units for employes at the Agricultural Research Center at nearby Beltsville. It added that a study must be made of the possibility of obtaining housing for these employes at some nearby place such as Greenbelt . . . Forest Service was given a cut of $3,380,500, which could mean it would have to lay off a few people instead of hire several hundreds as the President proposed . . . Farmers Home was given a cut of $2,300,000, of funds it had hoped to use to hire about 650 additional persons.

In approving additional funds for the Interior Secretary, the committee said it recognized its budget and administrative functions had to be strengthened at the secretarial level . . . The Bureau of Land Management was given a big cut of $1,893,200 . . . Reclamation, too, was given a sizable slash of $800,000 in its administrative fund. The cut will mean a reduction of several hundred employes if it stands . . . The Budget Bureau would get funds for two new field offices . . . The committee believes Civil Service's regional offices are overstaffed. It also believes that the agencies should make 50 percent of the job placements, and that the commission's job classification program is too ambitious. In other words, the committee would have the agencies do more of their own personnel work, with less being done by the Civil Service Commission.

Flying Disc Over Area Reported by Private Pilot

Circular Object Evades Small Plane South of National Airport, Flier Says

A flying disc, about 40 feet in diameter and 10 feet thick, was reported seen over the Washington area by an airplane pilot yesterday morning.

Totten

Bertram A. Totten, 625 Princeton pl. nw., an employe of the Library of Congress and a private pilot, said he saw it.

"I was flying a Luscombe ship which I had rented at the Hybla Valley Airport," he said, "and I had been practicing spins and other maneuvers. I was about 5000 feet south of National Airport and heading for Hybla Valley airport. I was at 5000 feet altitude.

"This circular object, which seemed to be of aluminum color and glittering on top, came across my path, about 1000 feet below. I put my ship into a dive to get a closer look at it. As I leveled off, the object, whatever it was, accelerated at a terrific speed, pointed somewhat upward as if to gain more altitude, and disappeared.

"I would say it was going 400 to 500 miles per hour as it disappeared to the east. It left a trail of vapor behind. It was in my sight for about one minute and a half."

Totten said he could not make out any windows or openings on the disc, and could not see any control surfaces.

The pilot said he was a test inspector in several aircraft plants during the war, and has been flying for the past 10 years. He said he had never seen any flying object before like the one he spotted yesterday.

Prince Georges' Future

Sothoron Act Gives Board More Latitude in County

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

(Second of a Series)

On July 1, most of the provisions of the Sothoron Act go into effect in Prince Georges County.

The commissioners now in office will have the power then to set up departments of county government; to expand or contract existing departments; to change salaries of workers paid by them.

They may set up new rules for the condust of their meetings; they will be required to maintain files of their "effective ordinances".

How much they will do, beyond what they are required to do, is a moot question at this time.

Commission Chairman Harry W. McNamee has said the commissioners haven't done any definite planning as yet on provisions of the Sothoron Act. "We've discussed it a little," he said. And the commissioners don't expect to start worrying about the Sothoron Act until after they get the budget settled, which will be by April 15.

Ring Is Hatless

How many of the incumbent commissioners will be in office after the November elections is another moot question. None has announced his candidacy as yet; none will confirm rumors that some of the five men now in office will not try for reelection.

Fact of the matter is that they probably don't know. County custom is for the Democratic and Republican State Central Committees to pick a slate of candidates for all elective county offices. Neither committee has as yet met, nor plans to announce its slate for another month or so.

Some provisions of the Sothoron Act won't become effective, however, until after the November elections. The incumbent commissioners don't get the salary increase. The requirement for two meetings a week starts with the term of the new commisisoners. So does the requirement for a full-time commissioner.

Will Draw $3600

Although the present commissioners receive a salary of only $1200 for acting as commisisoners, the new $3600 scale for four of the five new commissioners actually means a raise of only $1175. For the present commissioners get pay from seven sources for sitting as a board of health, as a police commission, as road commissioners, etc., and now draw annual pay of $2425.

Under the Sothoron Act, the $3600 will represent total pay for all their duties. And the $7500 paid to the full-time commissioner will be all he gets, too.

If, after the November elections, the Republicans have a majority on the Board of Commissioners, they legally can "sweep the deck and burn the broom" as Commission Clerk Linden Briscoe phrases it. They can fire every employe under the commissioners' jurisdiction, revamp the police force—start over.

If the Democrats get back in, there's expected to be little deck sweeping and broom burning.

Not "Home Rule" Bill

Senator L. Harold Sothoron, who sponsored the Prince Georges reorganization bill, and Jerrold V. Powers, counsel to the commissioners, who helped draft it, have both stated that it cannot be tagged a "home rule" bill, strictly speaking.

For the Sothoron Act, while it does allow the commissioners wider latitude in local government, does not give them the power to penalize county citizens. The ordinance power, Powers explained, is to deal with the commissioners' own administration of their government.

He said the act lacks these powers that the county would get under a "home rule" charter:

1. Bonding authority for the commissioners.
2. Enactment of penal ordinances.
3. Enactment of local game and fish laws.
4. Erection and maintenance of fences.

Can Hire Police

The broader powers which the commissioners can exercise under the Sothoron Act are contained in the simplicity of the act's provisions.

An example of this is in Section 9 of the commissioners' powers. It states that the commissioners shall "provide for a county police force."

Under existing law, the board is bound by the Assembly to limit that force to 42 men. Under the new law, it can authorize as many police as it can pay for; it can make personnel changes if it so wishes.

How quickly after July 1 the commissioners will move to exercise this and other phases of their new authority remains to be seen.

Tomorrow — What is in the future for Prince Georges County?

35 Youths Consecrated For Training as Officers in Corps

A consecration service for some 35 youths and young women who will be trained as Salvation Army officers and preachers yesterday concluded a two-day conference held at the Department of Commerce auditorium.

Following an inspirational talk by Col. P. L. DeBoise of Atlanta, Salvation Army chief secretary for 15 Southern States and the District, the young volunteers came forward from the audience to kneel and dedicate themselves to the Army service.

They will be trained at one of the four Salvation Army colleges, and probably one or two of the group will become Army missionaries, Col. DeBoise said.

There is a great need for young people who like adventure to go to recently opened missions in Guatemala and Mexico, Col. DeBoise said. A training college has been established in Mexico City which will graduate 10 or 12 Army workers a year, he said.

The conference here was attended by several hundred young people represeting Salvation Army posts in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, as well as the District.

Alexandria Man Dies; Cause Is Still Doubtful

Cause of the sudden death Saturday night of an Alexandria paperhanger, James A. Dudley, 63, was still in doubt last night, pending completion of an autopsy. Alexandria Coroner Dr. John Sims said he would issue a death certificate today.

Dudley was found lying outside his rooming house at 109 S. Patrick st., Alexandria, by a passerby, Iden Nichols, of 1012 Prince st., who said he was attracted by the tinkling of glass and the sound of someone falling. Dudley was dead on arrival at Alexandria Hospital.

Dudley's landlady, Mrs. W. H. Brawner, said Dudley told her "somebody hit me—they got my money and went that way." Inspector Russell Hawes confirmed her story, but said police believed him the victim of a stroke.

Suspect Found Trying to Hide Stolen Clothes

Swift Arrest Made Near Haberdashery By 2 Police Rookies

Two young policemen, walking a Tenth Precinct beat, arrested a housebreaking suspect yesterday while he was stuffing loot under the back steps of a house.

The suspect, William W. Robertson, 50, of 760 Quebec pl. nw., will appear in Municipal Court today on a housebreaking charge.

Pvts. William H. Closson, 26, and Mariot Graham, 28, said they were patroling Georgia ave., near Varnum st. nw., when they heard glass breaking nearby.

Glass Door Broken

Investigating, they found the glass front door of York Haberdasher, 3600 Georgia ave. nw., broken.

They began a search of the neighborhood. In an alley in the 3400 block of Georgia ave., the policemen said, they spotted Robertson stuffing clothes under the back steps of a house.

When the two policemen flashed their light on him, Robertson snapped at them:

"You haven't got anything on me!"

$600 Haul in Clothes

Closson said about $600 worth of clothes had been removed from the haberdashery.

In another report, A. Hunter Pritchard, co-owner of a men's clothing store at 1704 I st. nw., told police $300 in clothing and $10 in cash were stolen from the haberdashery overnight. Burglars broke open a rear door, he said.

Albert Levin, proprietor of the Arrow Super Market, 1255 S. Capitol st., said thieves took $356 worth of food—most of it in meats—and $28 in cash during the night.

Threat to Rights Of Veterans Seen In Hoover Plan

"Inherent rights of the veteran" would be jeopardized by the Hoover Commission's proposals to reorganize the Veterans' Administration, the national executive committee of Amvets charged yesterday.

Meeting at the Shoreham Hotel, the committee decided that although many of the Hoover recommendations have some merit, more efficiency and economy could be achieved if piecemeal legislation were prepared by persons experienced in administering veterans' affairs.

When the Rev. Dr. Orris G. Robinson arrived at Calvary Methodist Church, 1459 Columbia rd. nw., at 9:05 a. m. yesterday, he found the church virtually deserted.

In the building he met one small girl, singing loudly.

"Good morning, Songbird," he greeted her. "Are you happy today?"

"Yes, are you?" the child asked as she tagged through the church with the minister.

This was the beginning of a typical Sunday in the church. Before the day was over, the church would resound with the singing of hymns, children and older people would meet there to join in worshiping God, young people would gather to learn the teachings of the Bible.

By 9:45, when Sunday School began, the child who had greeted Dr. Robinson earlier was joined by a crowd of youngsters. Toddlers played together in one room, kindergartners in another. Dr. Robinson taught a class of junior high school boys and girls who plan to join the church soon.

A few minutes before 11, the street in front of the church was choked with cars bringing worshipers to the morning service. Men and women, boys and girls streamed into the sanctuary.

The organ prelude ended and the congregation joined Dr. Robinson in reading responsively the call to worship.

A little more than an hour later the congregation rose for the final hymn. Hymn books slid into the racks on the backs of the pews and the crowd of worshipers filed out of the building, pausing for a brief word with the minister and his wife.

Gradually the church emptied. By 1 o'clock it was silent.

Shortly before 4, the building was again alive with voices as high school and college people returned for their activities. In the sanctuary, the choir warmed up for a rehearsal.

DR. ORRIS G. ROBINSON
. . . Minister at Calvary

Dr. Robinson met with church members for conferences. He listened as they told him their personal problems, gave them advice. Afterward, he visited one of the young peoples classes before the evening service.

At 8 o'clock the sanctuary was again the scene of a service. This time the congregation was smaller than in the morning.

Young and old were there—some of them had been at the morning services. Others, unable to be present at 11 a. m. came to the church for the first time in the day.

At 9 p. m. Dr. Robinson pronounced the benediction and the organ swelled into Bach's "Christ Lay in Death's Embrace."

Again the congregation drifted out of the church. They stopped in small groups, talked briefly and then left.

Dr. Robinson turned out the lights in his study, took a final look at the silent building, then left. Another Sunday was over.

Col. Knight, Fort Meade Chief, To Quit Army After 31 Years

Col. Paul R. Knight, Headquarters Commandant at Fort Meade, Md., for the past two years, will retire from active duty this weekend following 31 years service.

Col. Knight

He will be succeeded by Col. Jesse L. Gibney, formerly with the United States Advisory Group in Greece.

Colonel Knight during World War I commanded Company D of the famous "Lost Battalion" of the 308th Infantry Regiment of the Seventy-seventh Division. He was then a lieutenant.

Company D under Knight's leadership made four assaults in an attempt to cut its way through the German lines to the encircled American unit.

Knight was twice wounded by German machine-gun fire while leading the company's attacks. Gen. John J. Pershing awarded him the Distinguished Service Cross.

In 1942, upon reorganization of the Seventy-seventh Infantry Division, Knight was assigned to it, and was the only officer from the old Seventy-seventh to report to it at that time.

Colonel Knight said yesterday that he plans to make his home in the Washington area and continue his hobby of water-color painting. One of his pictures is in the Corcoran Gallery of Art's permanent collection.

WHAT'S GOING ON AT FORD—

WORKERS TURN IDEAS INTO CASH

Extra thinking means extra money through Ford Suggestion Plan

LINCOLN-MERCURY EMPLOYEE, George Krodell, 42, Inspector of Assembly Parts at the Los Angeles plant, had a grand idea for shipping hood strainers. If other plants adopt his idea, he will receive an addition to the $426.30 already sent to him. Krodell used some of the money for doctor bills and applied the rest on a television set and record player which his wife and two daughters can enjoy.

THE tradition of American business has always been one of individual initiative, individual opportunity and individual reward. Can modern industry, with its assembly lines and its routine tasks, keep the spirit of enterprise strong in the individual employee?

Ford thinks that it can.

To encourage men to think for themselves, Ford has a Suggestion Plan and a companion Management Proposal Plan. These plans are being used in seventy-one Ford, Lincoln and Mercury plant units, as well as parts depots throughout the country for Ford cars, trucks, tractors, and Lincoln and Mercury cars.

The Plan is based on the belief that the man who is doing the job is the man who knows how that job can best be done. If any worker has an idea about how a job can be done better, more easily, more safely or more efficiently, all he has to do is write it out and drop it in a suggestion box. If his idea is good, it will be put into use. The calculable saving resulting from the improvement will be figured up, and the entire amount for two full months of operation will be awarded to the man who had the idea.

Awards range from $5 to $1,500, depending on the actual value of the improvement. During the time the plan has been in operation, 6450 awards have been made to employees for suggestions adopted. Cash payments total $348,765 as we go to press. Employee participation is high.

This is not a paternalistic scheme. Ford has found that it is good business. The plan is part of the Ford way of doing business . . . making the best possible products in the best possible way . . . to benefit producer, consumer, and the whole nation.

"IDEA MONEY" COMES IN HANDY. Fred Hendel, millwright in the maintenance department of the St. Paul Assembly Plant, suggested a new way to assemble gas tank straps. He received $101.74 from the Ford Suggestion Plan which paid for decorating.

REWARD FROM THE MISSUS. Improving a windshield tool at Edgewater, N. J., brought Karl Karcher $287.00; three more ideas boosted his total to $777.68. Ford pays gladly, knowing that every accepted idea benefits employees, company and consumer.

NEW COWBOY BOOTS FOR SHEILA. As a metal finisher in Ford's Dallas, Texas, plant, John Stracener has won eight straight awards totalling $95. He suggested new repair tools for metal work. His little girl helps spend part of the money for new boots.

INVESTS TOP AWARD IN '50 MODEL FORD. Edward Powser of the Production Foundry at the Rouge Plant proposed installing additional stop switches on the 1000-foot-long conveyor belt carrying scrap steel. Now the belt can be stopped instantly if necessary. He thus became the twentieth Ford man, in all Ford plants, to receive the top suggestion prize of $1,500 cash under Ford Motor Company's Suggestion Plan. Powser is shown taking delivery on a new 1950 Ford six-cylinder Tudor Sedan from his Ford dealer, Fred Gilbert, of River Rouge, Michigan.

SIGNORA TARCHIANI, wife of the Italian Ambassador, and Bruno Beran, Austrian born artist now living in Washington, with the pastel portrait of Signora Tarchiani by Mr. Beran shown for the first time at the artist's exhibition opening yesterday at the Arts Club

By Marie McNair

PORTRAITS of half a dozen gracious ladies of the Diplomatic Corps grace the walls of the Arts Club for Bruno Beran's first Washington showing. The Luxembourg Minister, Hugues LeGallais, came yesterday with Mme. LeGallais, whose mass of red gold hair and pink and white skin Mr. Beran has faithfully reproduced. Signora Tarchiani, another who had posed, was there yesterday, this time posing for photographers before the very excellent likeness of herself looking out from its frame.

Lady Franks' amber coloring, the dark eyes of Mme. Bonnet and Mme. Erkin made notable contributions to the effective collection.

Your Figure

Short-Waisted Gal Gets Fat Much Faster

By Ida Jean Kain

NO GETTING around it . . . let the short-waisted gal give the fat an inch, and it takes the waist. It's easy to see why—the less span between the waist and the top of the hip bone, the more the padding shows.

For example, when the little gal just a smidgen over 5 feet tall and short-waisted to boot adds seven pounds, the result is an apple-dumpling silhouette. Just those few extra pounds force her into a larger skirt band, and like as not bring forth the remark, "Getting a bit on the plump side, aren't you?"

It doesn't seem fair, because 10 added pounds on a long, tall girl are scarcely noticeable and she's quite apt to be greeted with the flattering remark, "You're looking very well these days."

Take Firm Grip
On Your Posture

BUT even if you're short on shape, all is not lost. Get a firm grip on your posture, pull up snug and slim through the middle, and simply refuse to settle for a dumpy figure. The uplift must all be through the middle and held with the middle muscles, shoulders relaxed.

The follow-up trick is to stretch, again centering the action through the middle. This may not make the waist span acally longer, but stretching tones the waist-encircling muscles and they hug the silhouette snugly. That's slimming and just what you want.

Try this controlled stretch. . .

Side-Bend Makes
For Suppleness

STAND with palms on top of head, fingers locked. Turn palms upward. Keep fingers laced together, and stretch arms overhead, holding them close to the ears. This pulls the ribs up away from the waist, and gets the whole figure on the beam. Relax, drop arms to top of head, but keep holding control through the middle. Then stretch upward again, three or four times.

A side-bender makes for suppleness, and that's slimming too . . .

Arch arms overhead, grasp left wrist with right hand, and bend sidewards to the right, pulling slim all along the left side. Make this a long, smooth stretch. Relax, change position of hands, bend to the left and pull slim all along the right side.

Perhaps that's enough exercise for a starter. There is just one thing more, however. I really hate to bring this up . . . but all calories that top requirements pop out at the waist, particularly on us short gals. But it's only the extra calories. Just think of desserts as extra, leave them off, and everything will come out neat and tidy.

Homemakers' Woe

Acute Maid Problem Has Two Angles

By Sam Stavisky

WHAT Washington needs—one of the things, that is—is a service organization willing and able to solve the Capital's acute maid problem.

That's the opinion of the household workers' staff of the local United States Employment Service.

Trouble is there are a great number of sleep-in jobs available for domestic workers, but few women willing to take them; and there are a large number of women seeking full time domestic sleep-out jobs but only few jobs available for them.

There are other troubles, too, principally arising from the fact that NEITHER the household worker nor the employers have had much, if any, training.

"Some local service agency, looking for a worthwhile project, would make a great contribution to the community by undertaking to train women for domestic work and to teach would-be employers how to treat their maids" ployers how to treat their maids," the USES division covering household workers.

Situation Here Especially Acute

THE maid situation is particularly acute here, according to Carr, because with so many other, more attractive kinds of work available for women, especially white women, domestic service is something of a last resort. The long hours, poor pay and the low social standing of domestic work attracts, with few exceptions, the least trained, least educated, least able persons.

During WPA days, the Government sponsored training classes for domestic workers. Little is done in this direction today. Carr and his chief assistants, Mrs. Myra Callis and Mrs. Mildred Mitchell, believe that this situation provides an opportunity for some organization in search of a worthy purpose to sponsor and finance such a training program.

Such a training project, the USES staffers believe, will help raise the pay scales for the domestic worker and the prestige of the work, and eventually result in attracting better workers.

Decent Working Conditions Needed

ALONG with the training program, a corollary project must be undertaken: That of setting standards of working conditions. Employers of domestic help, Carr and his assistant feel, ought to be instructed on the decent conditions to be expected by the maid. This is particularly true in the matter of sleep-in maids.

Why won't maids sleep in, even though it makes their living costs cheaper? Even though they may be given better living quarters than they can afford on the outside?

Because—say the women who turn down these sleep-in jobs—employers rarely give them regular hours of work but keep them on 24-hour duty; they are seldom permitted visitor privileges.

Domestic workers, especially Negro maids, prefer to live out also because they are provided with little social life in employer's homes. They prefer to return each evening to their own community and the congeniality of their own homes even though it may be shabby and overcrowded.

Most domestic workers in this area, according to the USES offices, prefer day work even though the work is harder, because there is a definite prevailing wage of $5 a day plus carfare, or 65 cents an hour, and the day's work runs a specific 8 or 9 hours.

Competition Keen For Few Available

SLEEP-IN maids, however, get anywhere from $5 a week to $35, with those employers who pay the least often demanding the most work and providing the meanest living quarters simply because they can't afford better. Higher pay, naturally, attracts better-trained domestics.

Carr says the local USES can, fairly expeditiously, provide domestics for day work and sleep-out full time jobs, but that the competition is very keen among would-employers for the relatively few available sleep-in maids.

Every Girl Has Hope, But Only the Far-Sighted Build a Chest Around It; Anne Suggests Suitable List of Linens

DEAR ANNE:
What are the essential things in a girl's hope chest? Mine is filling up, but I want to be sure I have the necessary items. L. S., Hagerstown, Md.

Assuming that you have household linens in mind, this is a rather hard question to answer as the elaborateness of your future home has a lot to do with it.

Here, however, are a few suggestions from "The Complete Home Encyclopedia," by Dorothy Pace (Caxton House).

1. The minimum number of bath towels needed is from three to six per person, depending on how often they are changed—usually once or twice a week. 2. If hand towels are changed twice weekly, the number you need per person is six. 3. A supply of around 2 dozen kitchen towels is required if you don't want to run short at is six for each bed—two on the bed, two in the laundry, and two on the shelf. The same rule applies for pillow cases, three per pillow being needed. 5. No rules can be given for a minimum number of table linens. It depends on whether tablecloths are supplemented with place mats or used only occasionally, and on how quickly a cloth becomes soiled. As for napkins, the supply should be large enough to permit a fresh one for each meal if you plan to change them that often. However, they are often used for more than one meal when each person tags his or hers with a napkin ring.

DEAR ANNE:
Can you give me a recipe for Lobster Cantonese? H. N. G.

CANTON LOBSTER
(Chow-Loong-Har)

In a preheated, heavy 10-inch frying pan, place 2 tablespoons oil or fat, 1 teaspoon salt, and a dash of pepper.

Grind coarsely through meat grinder and place in mixing bowl ½ pound lean pork. Finely dice and add 1 tablespoon carrot, 1 tablespoon celery, 1 teaspoon scallion. Add ½ teaspoon salt and a dash of pepper. Mix together thoroughly.

Cook in boiling water for 5 minutes 2 live baby lobsters. Take out of water. Remove and crack claws. Cut edible portion of belly in several pieces with a heavy knife or cleaver. Place pork mixture and lobster in frying pan. Add 1 cup chicken bouillon. Cover pan tightly and cook over a moderate flame about 10 minutes. Slightly beat and add 1 egg.

Cook over a high flame for 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Blend together and add 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 2 teaspoons soy sauce, and ¼ cup water. Cook for a few more minutes stirring constantly, until the juice thickens and the mixture is very hot. Serve immediately with hot, boiled rice. This recipe serves four.

Anne answers questions through her column only. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

PETUNIA!

The Big Circle Skirt, Fashion for All Ages

Every once in a while a fashion comes along that is really universal in the true sense of the word. We have one now in the big circle skirt—those wonderful skirts of printed cotton that are cut like a huge circle with a hole in the center.

Everybody can wear them—both young and old, and my guess is that everyone will wear them judging by the rate at which women are already buying them.

The bigger the print the better, too. And there's no limit to what you may wear with them—a sleeveless pique or linen blouse, a Riviera shirt, a low necked sheer blouse, or a tee shirt or sweater.

One on the Aisle—

Shirley Booth Scores a Triumph

By Richard L. Coe

ONE OF THE finest performances in many years is being given by Shirley Booth in New York's current "Come Back, Little Sheba."

The play is interesting, is, in fact, a good play and Miss Booth's costar, Sidney Blackmer, is giving the performance of his long career. But it is Miss Booth who makes "Come Back, Little Sheba" a performance you shouldn't miss.

What makes it so admirable a performance is her unerring balance between comedy and a human portrait. She is using that voice which has made her so merry a comedienne in such hits as "Three Men on a Horse," "The Philadelphia Story," "My Sister Eileen" and "Goodbye, My Fancy." Some of her little bits, her walk, her tired slouch, her outer coating of brass, are the very things which have made us merry ever since Mabel described where "Oiwin" was in "Three Men on a Horse." ("He's in the johnny. Bein' sick.")

But in her new role Miss Booth creates a truly pathetic, likable woman, at whom one does not laugh, but with whom one smiles. It is the ability to project this critical difference that makes it a wonderful performance.

She is playing the role of a dull, baffled woman in her forties, who 20 years before had more or less forced a well-to-do young medical student to marry her. It meant that he had to give up his dreams of becoming a doctor and that he lost the respect of his family and friends. He is now a chiropractor and, when the curtain rises has been a grateful disciple of Alcoholics Anonymous for nearly a year.

Their marriage has been empty and dull since the death of that baby which initiated their home. For company, as much as for anything else, they have converted their dining room into a furnished room for a succession of boarders. With them now is a young girl, about the age their daughter would have been. Her dalliance with a handsome extrovert followed by the arrival of her clean-living fiance disrupts the chiropractor more than it does the young lady.

He goes on a massive binge. Out from years of hiding comes his belief that his marriage has ruined his life and in a frenzy he tries to kill his wife with a meat ax. But with this inner hatred out of his spleen, and further AA treatment, "Doc" comes back to his Lola and as the curtain comes down you recognize that for all their incompatibilities, the man and his wife do love each other and that each relieves the other's human loneliness.

Author Was Drama Critic

Author (and former drama critic for the St. Louis Star-Times) William Inge has had something to say of human tenderness and maturity in his play, but while the idea comes through, some of his technical means stand in the way: the AA angle and the boarder's problem are a trifle artificial. For all that, it is an interesting play, effectively directed by Daniel Mann and very well acted by the whole company.

Blackmer's hectic second act scene is a beautiful piece of work and its contrast with the self-possessed man of the first has fine craftsmanship.

The play's title comes from the loss of Lola's dog, an unseen white-tailed creature she calls Sheba. And as Miss Booth plumps across the stage to the porch to call out, for the hundredth time, "Come Back, Little Sheba," you get the essential core of the character. After years in stock, on Ed Gardner's "Duffy's Tavern" for radio and as scores of embittered stage females, Miss Booth has come into her glory and created a character you'll never forget.

The Theater Guild can take pride in Miss Booth and "Come Back, Little Sheba."

RICHARD MORRIS' yarn yesterday about the zither craze rising from the Playhouse's "The Third Man" brings up Sam Wanamaker's story about that background music . . . The star of the Gayety's "Goodbye, My Fancy," passes along Darryl F. Zanuck's criticism after previewing the picture . . . "It's okay," stated the movie magnate, "only get rid of that darned banjo music."

MARYLAND University's Theater tonight presents "Othello," with Kan Calfee in the title role and Bernard Shur as Iago . . . The production has been produced by Dr. Ray Ehrensberger and directed by Elmer Barraclough, with setting by Sayre Harris.

ANOTHER performance tonight, tomorrow and Wednesday will be the drama group of the Montgomery County Jewish Community in J. B. Priestley's "Dangerous Corner" at the center's building, 2901 East-West Highway . . . John Coppinger has directed a cast that includes Irene Parker, Judy Frosh, Bernice Rose, Ike Friedlanger, Bob Daniels, Gue Barnett and Irving Fox.

TWO TRYOUTS are set for this week . . . The Mount Vernon Players will be casting "Hope Is the Thing With Feathers," curtain raiser for Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley," at 900 Massachusetts ave. tonight, Tuesday and Wednesday starting at 8:30 . . . The Westmoreland Players will audition for Barrie's "Dear Brutus," set for May production, tomorrow and Wednesday nights at the Westmoreland Congregational Church at 8 o'clock; for further information call Bettina Schmalbach at Ordway 4471.

NO PERFORMANCE at the Gayety tonight for "Goodbye, My Fancy," this being Faye Emerson's television night . . . The run resumes tomorrow evening.

Arlington GOP Convention Set

ACREAGE, SALE 75

MARYLAND

HOW WOULD you like your pockets to jingle by investing in good acreage? I'll give you a brief story of the most successful investor in acreage in the history of Washington. Watch this illustration and you'll see how his pockets jingled. This investor was Mr. Charles C. Glover, the late president of the Riggs National Bank. He bought a large tract of acreage at $200 an acre just south of Chevy Chase Circle when Connecticut ave. was only a proposed avenue. He paid him $3000 an acre for what he paid $200 an acre. Time shows that I bought it cheaper at $3000 an acre than he bought it at $200 an acre, as one acre of this land at Connecticut ave. and McKinley is now worth a million dollars. This shows how good acreage will make your pocketbook jingle. I have 500 acres near the South Capitol St. Bridge. I paid $500 for this ground 20 years ago, but now the bridge is open for traffic and this land is cheaper now at $3000 an acre than when I bought it at $500 an acre. This property in the business zone may reach a million dollars an acre some day. If you want your pocketbook to jingle, get busy, get active. Fulton R. Gordon. Reach me at my home, WO. 0933.

3 Hurt When Tornado Strikes Little Rock

Little Rock, Ark., March 26 (U.P.).—A violent tornadic wind swept through the heart of Little Rock tonight caving in store fronts, ripping bricks from buildings, blowing over cars and injuring at least three persons.

Hospitalized with injuries were Marianna Murphy of Little Rock and Homer Whittle and his daughter, Julia Ann, of North Little Rock.

Miss Murphy said the sevage wind toppled over the car in which she sat with friends in an outdoor movie theater on the city's outskirts. She said the car turned over three times.

Police said the tornadic wind which funneled down the Main st., principal thoroughfare of this capital city of 110,000 persons, caused extensive damage but there were no reports of casualities in the downtown district.

Mayor Sam Wassel said he was unable immediately to determine the extent of the damage caused by the sudden storm. He issued an alert to all emergency facilities. The street department was ordered to evaluate damage.

There was an unconfirmed report that a storm also had struck at Hope, Ark.

Weatherman Bob Gray said all electrical facilities in the bureau went off at 9:30 p. m. (EST). He classified the storm as a tornado.

Kansas Dust Storm Piles Up Cars, Kills 4

Kansas City, March 26 (AP).—A blinding dust storm swept Kansas today, causing at least four deaths in highway accidents and uncounted damage to crop lands.

Reports from many sections told of uncounted highway collisions and pile-ups as the dirt-laden clouds rolled across highways and rural roads. Some communities were entirely cut off from highway traffic as officials sought to block off the most dangerous routes.

The storm started Saturday in Texas and Oklahoma and was rolling northeastward through Kansas on a 40-mile wind. Farther west high winds also buffeted Colorado and Wyoming and blizzard conditions prevailed in some sections.

Worst accident was a 10-car pile-up near Salina in which Mr. and Mrs. Waclaw Kolcz, Polish displaced persons, were killed.

Clarence Parks, Mound Ridge, Kans., was killed in a crash near his home, and Mrs. H. G. Brandt, Wichita, was fatally injured in a smash-up at Elyria, Kans.

Stimulating Concert by Chorale Unit

By Richard Keith

Yesterday's concert at Constitution Hall by the Robert Shaw Chorale proved again that a program made up of generally unfamiliar music can be highly stimulating and need not be lacking in popular appeal.

This virtuoso singing group, directed by its dynamic founder, offered music of consistently superior standards. Even the humorous songs at the end had been dressed up in smart, tasteful arrangements.

Three Motets for a Time of Penance by the contemporary French composer, Poulenc, opened the concert. They are written in the composer's simple and somewhat wry style, great use being made of archaic-sounding fifths and mode-like progressions. The carefully modulated singing of soft passages conveyed a profound feeling of mystivcal penitence.

Debussy's Three Chansons, which followed complemented the motets beautifully. Both are more or less attempts to simulate through modern idioms, the styles of the sixteenth century.

The Easter Cantata, "Christ Lay in Bonds of Death," by Bach completed the first half of the program. This is undoubtedly one of the finest of the great cantor's church compositions. The moderate size of the Shaw ensemble made possible a flexibility and precision which is generally lacking in larger groups. Several of the sections were assigned to unison voices, a procedure possible only through expert direction and alert singing.

For this and some other numbers, Shaw used a small instrumental ensemble, which, in spite of its makeshift composition (five strings, one oboe, one trumpet, three trombones, and a piano), sounded adequate for the most part.

Three rarely heard Schubert songs, seventeenth century madrigals and anthems, four operatic choruses, and arrangements by Gail Kubik of three American folksongs made up the second half of the program.

It was particularly rewarding to hear the operatic extracts. In opera houses, one seldom hears a really good choral performance since money and time are usually concentrated on solo singers. It would be interesting to hear this group give an entire concert of opera choruses that we are used to hearing bungled.

Shaw very democratically passed the solos around. All gave competent performances.

In the past few years the Shaw Chorale has set a new standard for choral groups and has rendered many of the older organizations obsolete. Let us hope that more and more conductors will try to emulate the Shaw techniques.

Pope Pius XII—Priest and Statesman

Pacelli Saw Hitler Was Threat to More Than Church

Kees Van Hoek, a native of The Hague and now an Irish citizen, has been a correspondent in London, Geneva and the United States. His first biography of Pius XII appeared in 1939. After much research and a private audience with the Pope last fall, Van Hoek has written in "Pope Pius XII, Priest and Statesman," a full and vivid description of the man and his career, from a delicate boy in Rome to supreme ruler of the Roman Catholic world. The biography is presented by The Washington Post during the present Holy Year in 24 daily installments.

Chapter IX

CARDINAL PACELLI had always been known for his sympathy for the German people. The simplicity, energy and reliability which were once the best characteristics of the German people, conformed to his own. Hitler changed all that, although one of his first acts was to send von Papen to Rome to negotiate a new Concordat. Cardinal Pacelli guaranteed to curb the political activity of the Catholic clergy in Germany in return for Vice Chancellor von Papen's promise in Hitler's name that there would be no discrimination against the leaders of the recently dissolved Center Party of Germany, and that the Church would enjoy all its rights on complete freedom. For a few months the agreement was grudgingly observed; soon encroachments began once more and grew stronger and louder.

Cardinal Pacelli saw clearly from the outset how there was more at stake than the attack on the Church, that the whole structure of international relationship was in the balance. He saw in what was happening the grim shadow of the future, and he surveyed the changing political scene with growing concern. "No one can fathom what Pacelli means to us," the Pope said, as he issued the Encyclical "With Deep Anxiety."

Responsibility Fixed

"IF THE tree of peace planted by us with pure intention in German soil has not borne the fruit we desired in the interests of your people, says the Encyclical, "no one in the whole world who has eyes to see or ears to hear can say today that the fault lies with the Church and with her Supreme Head. The experience of the past years fixes the responsibility. It discloses intrigues which from the beginnng had no other aim than a war of extermination.

In the furrows in which we had labored to sow the seeds of true peace, others sowed the tares of suspicion, discord, hatred, calumny, of secret and open fundamental hostility to Christ and His Church, fed from a thousand different sources and making use of every available means. On them and on them alone and on their silent and vocal protectors rests the responsibility that now on the horizon of Germany there is to be seen not the rainbow of peace but the threatening storm-clouds of destructive religious wars."

"Venerable Brethren," thus the Pope continues his address to the German Episcopate, "We have not grown weary of presenting to the rulers who guide the destinies of your nation the inevitable consequences of tolerating or worse still of favoring such tendencies. We have done all we could to defend the sanctity of the solemn pledges, the inviolability of obligations freely entered into, against theories and practices which if officially approved, must destroy all confidence and render intrinsically worthless every future pledge.

"When the time comes to place before the eyes of the world these endeavors of ours, all right-minded persons will know where to look for the peacemakers and where to look for the peace-breakers. Anyone who has any sense of truth left in his mind and even a shadow of the feeling of justice left in his heart will have to admit that, in the difficult and eventful years which followed the Concordat, every word and every action of ours was ruled by loyalty to the terms of the agreement; but also he will have to recognize with surprise and deep disgust that the unwritten law of the other party has been arbitrary misinterpretation of agreements, evasion of agreements, evasion of the meaning of agreements, and finally more or less open violation of agreements."

Cardinal Pacelli with the late Pope Pius XI

Potent Gloved Hand

SELDOM can a gloved hand have hit harder! And in expounding the fundamental precepts of Catholic religion, in fact those of all Christianity, the Pope does not hesitate to say: "Whoever transposes race or people, the state or constitution, the executive or other fundamental elements of human society (which in the natural order have an essential and honorable place), from the scale of earthly values and makes them the ultimate norm of all things, even of religious values, and deifies them with the idolatrous cult, perverts and falsifies the divinely created and appointed order of things"—or to lash, in another place: "the arbitrary revelations that certain contemporary prophets try to extract from the so-called myth of blood and race." Then, laying his finger on the outrageous statement, that "right is what is advantageous to the German people," the Pope hits out:

"This fundamental principle, cut off from moral law, would mean in relations between states a perpetual state of war amongst the various nations; in the life of the state it confuses advantage and right, and refuses to recognize the fundamental fact that man as a person possesses rights given him by God which must be preserved from every attempt by the community to deny, suppress, or hinder their exercise. Whoever transgresses this order shakes the pillars of society and imperils its tranquillity, security, and even its existence."

The duties of the Papacy demand spiritual even more than worldly wisdom. The Church does not aspire to temporal power. Its foreign policy has only one aim: the welfare of the Catholic community in every country, no matter what form of government it enjoys, whether it is democracy or dictatorship, provided its effects are just and charitable. Wherever that spiritual well-being is endangered through laws or measures restricting the primary right of the individual to call his soul his own and to serve God according to the dictates of his own conscience, the Church stands up against such a violation of the fundamental principle of Catholicity. In doing so it serves the cause of all Christendom, of which it is the spearhead.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

A Diller, a Dollar, and a Washington Scholar

A few days ago this department got itself involved in a question of historical fact raised by Ham (Joe Palooka) Fisher.

Our neighbor on the right had one of his characters refer to George Washington's having thrown a dollar across "the Potomac." When a reader complained that it should have been "the Rappahannock," I concurred.

But Franklin W. Marsh of 5711 Colorado ave. nw. throws me into a tailspin with the news that it was neither the Potomac nor the Rappahannock. As a matter of fact, he says George Washington didn't throw a dollar over any river, and the whole story is just a silly myth.

His authority for such heresy? None other than the late Congressman Sol Bloom, a recognized expert on the history of Washington's day.

District Liner Marsh explains that when he was writing "Adventure Into Freedom," which he hopes to publish in a few months, he checked with Congressman Bloom and was told:

"The legend has it that Washington made his prodigious throw when he was a young man, in his prime. But it couldn't have happened that way, because the first United States silver dollar wasn't minted until 1794, when Washington was 62 years old. There is not a shred of evidence to support the myth that Washington ever threw any coin over any stream of water."

COULD BE

Herb Harris of 1121 N. Kensington st., Arlington, Va., thinks he knows what's behind all the flying saucers we've been seeing lately.

Herb says this is probably excursion season on Mars, and the Interstellar Sightseeing

Co. has been running two-day round trips to Earth at reduced rates.

That sounds logical. They get close enough to see what horrendous shape we're in, and turn tail for home without even bothering to land.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Lois Alexander of 1228 I st. nw., notes that a local department store recently advertised a "Treat Tray" with the words; "Serves sandwiches to nuts."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Four 6-week-old pups." (Victor 4618.)

At other dames he'd never look.

For things his mother used to cook.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

I am a faithful reader, and think I see your column every day. But you confuse me.

One day you refer to your 13-year-old relative, and then a few days later you refer to your 14-year-old relative. Do you have two boys? Or did your one son have a birthday?

Pat Levington
3612 S. 1st rd.
Arlington, Va.

Dear Pat:

When the District Line first began, he was my 11-year-old relative. He has moved up one notch each March since then. And I don't mind telling you he's beginning to make me feel like an old man.

Bill

FIRST THINGS FIRST

Every time those Peace Cross flood pictures begin to appear in the papers, I start getting letters from folks who really know what trouble is.

Currently, Hugh Charles writes that anybody who has time to worry about the Communist spy hunt or the fact that the State Department isn't exactly stately, obviously hasn't had a flooded basement lately. Dolefully, he adds:

"Here's another listing for your Give-Away section: 'One pine - paneled swimming pool.'"

IT ALL GOES TO WAIST

W. M. Devine of 234 F st. nw. knows a fellow whose annual salary goes into six figures—his, his wife's and their four kids.

The silly rhymes I put out
May cause a smile or sigh.
Some ask me how I do it;
While others ask me why.

People Seek Leadership For Peace

By Drew Pearson

A deluge of mail has poured into this office lately outlining ideas on how to win the peace. This mail highlights one of the most important problems faced by Government — so far largely neglected—how to mobilize the energy of millions of Americans behind the prosaic goal of peace.

Pearson

It is easy to mobilize during war. There is an urgency, a drama, a danger behind war. Peace is humdrum. It is easy to sit back, pay taxes, let the diplomats wrangle about peace. Then, when they fail, as they have of late, the rest of us go back to fight all over again.

The American public would like to help a little bit more in preventing wars rather than merely fighting to win wars after they have started.

Undoubtedly this has been behind the stream of peace ideas which have deluged this writer since a brief mention, one week ago, that we set up a Marshall Plan of ideas to win the peace.

Some of these ideas may not be practical. But all the ideas show how actively the American people are thinking, and how willing they are to do their part if they can get an ounce of leadership from their Government.

Tragedy is that instead of leadership, they sometimes get discouragement.

Last year, for instance, the Junior Chamber of Commerce in Charleston, W. Va., worked out a plan to bring 20 young men from various parts of the world, including Iron Curtain countries, and give them one year's combined work and training in West Virginia. Various West Virginia employers were delighted with this plan to win friends, and the young men were even picked for the trip.

Then the State Department, believe it or not, said no.

Meanwhile Junior Chambers in most of the other States, inspired by West Virginia, had prepared similar exchanges. Now they are up in the air, too.

Despite this, the American people, being resilient and persevering, still have some ideas which they aren't content to have trampled on by the bureaucrats. And here are some they have forwarded to me:

F. W. Danner, Akron, Ohio (a printer)—"I am willing to print at my own expense one million color supplements or comic pamphlets telling the peace story of the American people and to be distributed behind the Iron Curtain. There are various other members of the comic-book industry who would furnish the Government perhaps 25 million of these, free of charge. The future of our country, the future of the world depends upon a spirit of tolerance and friendship between the people of the United States and Russia."

Leo O. Hanley, Fisherville, Mass.—"Wars will stop when people realize the result of hydrogen bomb destruction. So let's produce a motion picture telling the dread story of hydrogen-atomic war and circulate it everywhere, so the people of the world can understand."

A Big Industrialist (who asked that his name be withheld)—"I will contribute $100,000 for the purpose of buying 10,000 shortwave radio sets to be parachuted or smuggled behind the Iron Curtain. If enough of the Russian people know us or can hear us through the Voice of America, the Politburo cannot force them into war."

"No guess-work" in THOMAS HAIR TREATMENT

SAYS HENRY BRANDON
ORCHESTRA LEADER
Now at the Mayflower Hotel
"A Thomas expert obviously knows how to remove dandruff flakes and how to relieve the itch which they cause. He doesn't beat around the bush (no pun intended)—he tells you straightforwardly just what Thomas treatment will do for you and what it won't do. You know before you start just what to expect," says Henry Brandon.
Well, we do try hard, Mr. Brandon. And we have the advantage of a background of 30 years of successful experience. When we think we can be helpful, we say so. But when we think that Thomas treatment won't do what a person wants done, we are equally frank. We sincerely feel that this professional integrity has formed a sound backbone for our success structure. We'll advise you frankly, too—without charge or obligation. Come in today and find out for yourself just what Thomas treatment is, and what it can do to help solve your hair problems.
